Definition
Concern for confidentiality exists throughout the social services delivery system. However, system of care emphasizes interagency collaboration. The purpose of this section is to provide guidance surrounding collaboration with the understanding that the provision of child protective services (CPS) involves responsibility for the sensitive management of confidential information. The rationale for stringent confidentiality rules in CPS is concern for the protection of the child. CPS records contain detailed information about child maltreatment, which may include graphic documentation received during CPS assessment activities and verbatim documentation of the child's version of maltreatment. Information provided by the initial reporter, supportive statements from collateral contacts, and other such information is collected because of a thorough CPS assessment by the agency. Families have a right to privacy. More critically, the child has a right to protection from public disclosure of information learned during the CPS assessment. North Carolina General Statute (N.C.G.S.) § 7B-2901, subsections c., d., h., and i., address the confidentiality of protective services records for children in the custody of the Department of Social Services or under placement by the court. N.C.G.S. §108A-80 addresses confidentiality of all social services records. The North Carolina Administrative Code (10A NCAC 70A .0113) specifically defines the conditions under which a director may allow access to a child's protective services record. North Carolina S.L. 2023-14 § 7B-524. Confidentiality of information and records specifies confidentiality of a surrendering parent in a Safe Surrender case.

INTERAGENCY SHARING OF INFORMATION ABOUT JUVENILES

N.C.G.S. § 7B-302 \(a\) states that the Department of Social Services (DSS) shall disclose confidential information to any federal, State, or local governmental entity or its agent needing confidential information to protect a juvenile from abuse and neglect. Per N.C.G.S. § 7B-302\(a3\) any individual member of the North Carolina General Assembly (NCGA) or joint legislative oversight committee of the North Carolina General Assembly may request access to confidential information and records necessary for oversight of programs related to child protective services except those protected by federal law, including state plan requirements with federal programs.

This, along with N.C.G.S § 7B-302 \(e\), expands the release of confidential information from county held records to qualified out-of-state entities and to situations other than an open CPS assessment.

The goal of North Carolina’s Family Preservation Services Program is to prevent unnecessary placement of children away from their families by providing in-home services aimed at restoring families in crisis to an acceptable level of functioning delivered within a System of Care framework. These services are designed to meet the following objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Stabilize the crisis which put the family at imminent risk; • Keep the child, family, and community safe by defusing the potential for violence (physical, sexual, emotional, and/or verbal abuse); and • Help families develop the skills, competencies, and resources they need to handle future crisis more effectively. II. AGENCY STANDARDS & PROGRAM DESIGN A. ELIGIBILITY Families eligible for IFPS services have at least one child age birth through 17 years who is at imminent risk of placement in out-of-home care. Families with adopted children are eligible for referral to the program when it is determined that a disruption in the adoption placement will occur without intensive services. The priority for case assignment are those children at risk of placement into the child welfare system, and at least 75% of cases served each year shall be county child welfare agency referred cases, but referrals may also come from the mental health, developmental disabilities, substance abuse, or juvenile justice systems. Out-of-home placement means the removal of a child from his or her own home with placement in a non-relative setting for a duration of two weeks or more. Responsibility for his or her supervision, care and essentials of daily living is given to the county child welfare agency, juvenile justice, or public or private mental health/developmental disabilities/ substance abuse systems. At least one parent or another primary caretaker must indicate that he or she is willing and able to participate in IFPS. Note: Primary caretaker means a parent (including adoptive or long-term foster parent), legal guardian, or someone who is acting in loco parentis (has assumed the status and obligation of a parent) in relation to the child(ren). This is also consistent with the foundational philosophy of System of Care. Family Reunification Services

Definitions

Child Placement

Services are designed to:

- Strengthen, preserve and/or reunite families after children have come into agency custody or placement responsibility by helping families improve the conditions in the home that caused agency intervention;
- Ensure a single, stable, safe, nurturing, and appropriate temporary living arrangement for children removed from their homes;
- Achieve an alternative safe, permanent home for all children in agency custody or placement responsibility who cannot return home.

- The date of the first judicial finding that the child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect; or
- The date that is 60 days after the date on which the child is removed from the home (Sec. 475. [42 U.S.C. 675]).

Family Foster Care

“Family Foster Care” means a planned, goal-directed service in which the temporary protection and care of children take place in a family foster home. Family foster care is a child welfare service for children and their parents who must live apart from each other for a period due to abuse, neglect, dependency, or other circumstances necessitating out-of-home care.

Foster Care

"Foster Care" means the continuing provision of the essentials of daily living on a 24-hour basis for dependent, neglected, abused, abandoned, destitute, orphaned, undisciplined or delinquent children or other children who, due to similar problems of behavior or family conditions, are living apart from their parents, relatives, or guardians in a family foster home or residential child-care facility. The essentials of daily living include but are not limited to shelter, meals, clothing, education, recreation, and individual attention and supervision [N.C.G.S. §131D-10.2].

Primary Caregiver

A legal guardian or an adult who is acting in loco parentis and has assumed the status and obligation of a parent in relation to the child(ren).

Residential Child-Care Facility (Child Care Institution)

"Residential Child-Care Facility" means a staffed premise with paid or volunteer staff where children receive continuing full-time foster care. Residential child-care facility includes child-caring institutions, group homes, and children's camps which provide foster care (N.C.G.S. §131D-10.2).

Safety

Policy	Legal Basis
The primary concern of Child Welfare Services is protecting children. When a safety threat (present or impending) is identified, the county child welfare services agency must respond and develop a plan of safety. At no time should a county child welfare worker leave a child(ren) in unsafe circumstances. The intent of safety planning is to reach an agreed upon plan with the family that imposes the lowest level of intrusiveness possible while assuring a child(ren)’s safety.	Non-secure custody will only be granted when one or more criteria exist as specified in N.C.G.S. § 7B-503. North Carolina statute N.C.G.S. § 7B-101 (19) defines a safe home as “a home in which the child is not at substantial risk of physical or emotional abuse or neglect.”

Definitions
Safety Threat Defined A safety threat exists when there are conditions or actions within the child(ren)’s home that represent the likelihood of imminent serious harm to the child(ren). There are two types of safety threats: present and impending. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) “Present safety threat” refers to an immediate, significant, and clearly observable family condition (severe harm or threat of severe harm) occurring to a child(ren) in the present. Present danger is easier to detect because it is transparent and is occurring now. If present danger is observed, the child(ren) is not safe. 2) “Impending safety threat” refers to threatening conditions that are not immediately obvious or currently active but are out of control and likely to cause serious harm to a child(ren) soon. Impending danger is covert. Impending danger is a threat that can be reasonably expected to result in serious harm if safety action is not taken and/or sustained. These threats may or may not be identified at the onset of involvement by a county child welfare services agency but are understood upon a more complete evaluation and understanding of the individual and family conditions and functioning. To be classified as a safety threat, a situation, condition, or behavior must meet the “safety threshold.” The safety threshold is the point when a parent’s behaviors, attitudes, emotions, intent, or circumstances create conditions that fall beyond mere risk of future maltreatment and have

Safety

Definitions
become an actual imminent threat to the child(ren)’s safety. These conditions could reasonably result in the serious and unacceptable pain and suffering of a vulnerable child(ren). Safety Agreement Defined A safety agreement/plan is made between a parent and a county child welfare services agency when a child(ren) is in immediate danger in their own home because of a safety threat. A safety agreement/plan must be all the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) Enough to manage safety; 2) Tailored to the address the child(ren)’s safety issues that exist within the family; 3) Immediately available so that it is capable of being in operation the same day it is created; and 4) A plan that includes actions and goals that are specific and measurable. Due Process Considerations Under the United States Constitution, parents have a fundamental right to the care, custody, and control of their child(ren). Safety actions that require the separation or restriction of a parent’s access to their child(ren) affect a parent’s custodial rights. When a county child welfare services agency interferes with this right, reasonable procedural protections must be in place. This procedural protection often takes the form of a hearing in juvenile court. In certain situations, to protect a child(ren), a county child welfare worker conducting an assessment may be required to perform actions that affect a parent’s custodial rights without first providing procedural due process. These instances should be used only to the extent necessary to protect the child(ren) and should not continue longer than necessary to assure safety. Procedural protection must be provided within a reasonable period, even when a parent agrees to the infringement on the parent’s own custodial right. Guardians, custodians, caretakers, and other relatives do not have these same constitutional rights; this due process consideration only applies to birth and adoptive parents.

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
ASSESSING SAFETY The Safety Assessment (DSS-5231) must be used during a CPS-A and establishes the safety threats for ongoing service needs. The assessment of safety is an ongoing process that starts at the time a case is accepted for a CPS-A and continues until case closure.	The Safety Assessment (DSS-5231) is completed during a CPS-A. However, the Safety Assessment can be referred to for guidance regarding safety concerns identified during ongoing services. SAFETY PLANNING

Safety

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
SAFETY PLANNING An individualized safety agreement must be developed when a safety threat has been identified. The Safety Agreement/Plan must be documented through: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Temporary Parental Safety Agreement (TPSA) developed with a CPS Safety Assessment or • The Safety Agreement developed with a family during a CFT during the provision of CPS services (Assessments or In-Home). When a Safety Agreement requires modification (i.e., new concerns arise; some safety issues identified have been addressed and others remain) the Safety Agreement must reflect the changes. As soon as the county child welfare services agency obtains enough evidence that the safety threats no longer exist, the agency must dissolve the Safety Agreement. The Safety Agreement must be signed by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A parent (someone with legal authority) and • The county child welfare worker and • The county child welfare supervisor. If applicable, a guardian, custodian, or caretaker, and/or approved TSP must also sign the agreement. This must be evidenced by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A Safety Agreement signed by the county child welfare supervisor 	While this is not an exhaustive list, there are four main categories of safety interventions that may be incorporated into a safety agreement: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) Resource support refers to safety actions that address a shortage of family resources and resource utilization (such as obtaining heat, water, electricity, food, childcare, etc.), the absence of which directly threatens the safety of the child(ren). 2) Social support includes actions that reduce social isolation. Social support may be used alone or in combination with other actions to reinforce and support the capacity of the parents or other caretakers. 3) Crisis management is specifically concerned with intervening to halt a crisis and to facilitate problem solving to bring a state of calm to a family. The purpose of crisis management is to quickly control the threat to the child(ren)'s safety. Crisis management will often be employed along with other safety actions. 4) Separation or restriction refers to the removal of any household member from the home for a period or otherwise interfering with a parent's custodial rights. Separation is viewed as a temporary action. Separation may involve, among other things, the child(ren) temporarily moving to a safe environment, a friend or relative moving into the home, the protective parent moving with the child(ren) to a safe environment, a parent agreeing not to have unsupervised contact with the child(ren), a parent agreeing to forfeit decision-making authority over the child(ren), or the alleged perpetrator agreeing to leave the home. At any time while a Safety Agreement is in place, the county child welfare services agency may consider involving the court.

Candidacy for Foster Care

Candidacy

Background
Candidacy for foster care is defined in the ACF Children’s Bureau’s IV-E Policy manual based on requirements in Title IV-E of the social security act. Federal policy allows counties to claim reimbursement for specific allowable costs when serving children who meet the definition and documentation requirements to be candidates for foster care.
Policy	Legal Basis
Counties can claim administrative costs to the IV-E foster program for case management services provided to a child for whom the county has the required documentation or evidence that the child meets the definition to be a candidate for foster care. Counties must stop claiming administrative costs when a child no longer meets the candidacy definition or if the county fails to document that the child continues to meet the candidacy definition after six months.	Section 472(i)(2) of the Social Security Act allows claiming for administrative costs for children at imminent risk of removal from the home if reasonable efforts are being made to prevent the need for removal or, if necessary, pursue removal from the home and if the state has made, not less often than every six months, a determination of as to whether the child remains at imminent risk of removal. According to the federal IV-E Policy Manual (8.1D. Question 2), the legal frame for determining when a child becomes a candidate for foster care is provided by Section 471(a)(15)(B)(i) of the Social Security Act, which requires a Title IV-E agency to make reasonable efforts to prevent a child’s removal from the home. Section 471(a)(16) of the Social Security Act requires the development of a case plan as defined in Section 475(1) and in accordance with requirements of Section 475A.

Candidacy for Foster Care

Definition

Candidacy for foster care is defined in the ACF Children’s Bureau’s IV-E Policy manual based on requirements in Title IV-E of the social security act. Federal policy allows counties to claim reimbursement for specific allowable costs when serving children who meet the definition and documentation requirements to be candidates for foster care.

Candidate for Foster Care: a child at imminent or serious risk of removal from the home into foster care as evidenced by the county child welfare agency’s making efforts to either prevent removal or pursuing removal.

Documentation and Evidence of Candidacy: a written case plan that clearly indicates that, absent effective preventive services, foster care is the planned arrangement for the child. The case plan must be developed together with the family, describe the services offered and provided to prevent removal of the child from the home, and document why the child is at serious or imminent risk of removal absent effective preventive services. In the absence of a case plan, evidence of court proceedings for removal can also serve as documentation and evidence of foster care candidacy. The evidence can be in the form of a petition requesting removal or a court transcript showing the county has requested removal into foster care.

Length of candidacy: A child will only be a candidate for as long as the child is at serious risk of entering foster care and the county child welfare agency is either pursuing removal or making reasonable efforts to prevent such removal. Federal policy does not set a maximum length of time a child can be a candidate, but candidacy is expected to be finite. A written justification is needed to retain a child in candidate status longer than six months.

Candidacy for Foster Care

Protocol-What you must do	Guidance-What you should do
Establishing and documenting candidacy. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> To establish candidacy for a child at serious risk of entering foster care, a worker must develop a services plan with the family that: clearly states why the child is at serious or imminent risk of removal to foster care absent effective preventive services (being at imminent risk of removal from the home to a treatment or a juvenile justice facility does establish foster care candidacy) describes services to be offered or provided to the family specifically to prevent removal into foster care. When services are provided to a child who is not a candidate (either because the child has never been determined to be a candidate or because the child is no longer a candidate), IV-E funding cannot be used to reimburse costs. See Appendix 3.4 Child Welfare Funding-CPS for additional information on costs that can and cannot be claimed to IV-E and on other sources of funding. Note: A child at imminent risk of removal for placement in a treatment or Juvenile Justice facility does establish foster care candidacy. During the development of a case plan that establishes candidacy, the worker must communicate with the family that the child is at serious or imminent risk of entering foster care without effective services and clearly outline what changes are required to prevent removal. All efforts made to prevent the removal of the child from the home must be documented in the client record.	Every child who has been maltreated and found in need of CPS In-Home Services does not meet the federal requirements to be considered candidates for foster care. In North Carolina, referrals to CPS In-Home Services are based on a moderate to high risk of repeat maltreatment. Candidacy for foster care is determined based on imminent or serious risk that a child will enter foster care absent effective preventive services and must be documented in a plan of services developed together with the family. The development of a case plan is best done in the context of a Child and Family Team meeting. When developing the case plan, a conversation with the family should include why the child is at serious risk of entering foster care without effective services. These are potentially uncomfortable conversations but are crucial and should be entered into honestly and in a non-threatening way. If it would be untrue to tell a family that the plan is foster care absent effective preventive services, that is an indication the child may not meet the candidacy definition.

Jurisdiction in Child Welfare

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
PURPOSE Child Protective Services are federally mandated; however, North Carolina remains one of the few states that administers its child welfare system at the county level. These federally mandated services are applicable to the entire state without consideration to county lines. The Division of Social Services (the Division) recognizes that all children in North Carolina have the right to live free of abuse and neglect without regard to where they live or with whom they live. Therefore, all 100 counties in North Carolina bear the responsibility for ensuring the safety and well-being of all children and their families. This policy provides guidance but does not cover every conceivable situation that may arise. Therefore, counties must remember that some basic premises exist that guide this policy. The safety of North Carolina’s children and their families is paramount. Although North Carolina is a county-administered system, the protection of children knows no county lines. The county of residence is the primary county responsible for the delivery of services to a family. N.C.G.S. § 153A-257 provides guidance to the Division to determine which county is responsible for a needy person who meets the eligibility requirements for public assistance offered by the county or for social services required by the person. This statute includes a provision about the residence of a minor and further provides that the Division is responsible for determining which county shall be provide child protective services when two or more counties cannot agree. Although the statue does not define the term “reside,” in this context the term has its ordinary meaning. A child “resides” where: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • He or she is receiving public assistance, • He or she is enrolled in school or childcare, • He or she works, • He or she receives mail, or • The location listed on the child’s medical records, driver’s license, or library card. The child resides in the place where he or she sleeps most often, lives, and has the greatest number of daily contacts unless the child is in a licensed foster care placement, a hospital, or other remedial facility. This policy defines a process that addresses the complicated issues presented when more than one county is engaged in the delivery of services to a family.

With the implementation of the Multiple Response System, county child welfare agencies utilize the principles of both family-centered practice and System of Care. Both recognize that the protection of children is a collaboration between the county child welfare agency, the family, and other professionals that are involved with the family. It is also a partnership between county child welfare agencies where collaboration and accountability model a desired behavior to the families that are served. When the family-centered practice and System of Care principles are applied to the interactions with families and other professional, there is the expectation to see greater accountability which leads to better outcomes for children and families. When the delivery of child welfare services involves multiple counties, it is expected that each county child welfare agency work in a collaborative and coordinated manner in order to provide greater continuity of services to families while providing stability and ensuring safety for children. Each community is best able to identify, build, and make the most of existing resources to assist families. This section will provide guidance on conducting Child Protective Services (CPS) Assessments that involve out-of-home placement providers, as well as, when there are multiple counties involved. Guidance is also provided for situations when multiple counties are involved during the provision of CPS In-Home Services, Child Placement Services and Adoption Services that involve disruptions and dissolutions. When a CPS report indicates more than one county will be involved with the delivery of services, the county where the child resides is responsible for conducting the CPS Assessment except for specific circumstances identified in this section. Whenever possible, face-to-face meetings should occur when discussing case decisions and case plans by all county child welfare agencies involved. Note: When a county child welfare agency requests any assistance from another county child welfare agency, that request shall be honored. LEGAL BASIS North Carolina laws regarding the provision of protective services are in Chapter 7B of the North Carolina General Statutes. Please refer to "Legal Basis" in Assessments in the NC Child Welfare manual for additional information regarding the laws that govern the provision of child protective services in North Carolina. Additional guidance is provided in North Carolina's Administrative Code Title 10A - Health and Human Services - Chapter 70 - Children's Services. Laws regarding the provision of child placement services are also located in Chapter 7B of the North Carolina General Statutes. Intake/Screening Policy for screening reports of alleged abuse, neglect, and/or dependency can be found in Intake in the NC Child Welfare manual. N.C.G.S. §7B-302 directs county child welfare agencies that upon receipt of any report, a prompt and thorough assessment shall be conducted. The county that receives the report is responsible for screening the report based on the available information, except for reports involving conflicts of interest for the county child welfare agency or reports involving children that reside in another county. Please see Conflict of Interest for details of how to screen reports involving conflicts of interest. Note: Receipt of a report refers to the first time that the reporter contacts the agency even if that county child welfare agency will not be the county responsible for conducting the CPS Assessment. When the report involves a conflict of interest or a child that resides in another county, the county who receives the report must take all the information from the reporter. The county that took the report must make verbal notification to the child’s county of residence who must make a screening decision and, if accepted, determine the assessment track and response time.

Providing Services When There are No Other Counties Involved 1.) When the parents move to another county When the parents move to another county and the transfer of the case is being considered, take into consideration the following: (a.) When the permanent plan for the child is reunification, with whom is the child being reunified and where does he or she reside? (b.) When reunification with the parent is no longer the goal or does not appear likely. (c.) The transfer of court cases is discussed in VII (Venue) of this Section. (d.) Whenever the county child welfare agency who has placement responsibility for the child(ren) needs assistance from another county child welfare agency to make contacts, provide supervision, or conduct an assessment, the staff and their respective supervisors will discuss the case either face-to-face or by conference call and jointly determine the activities, timeframes, documentation required, and communication expectations. 2.) When a child who is in the custody of a county child welfare agency is placed with unlicensed relatives or fictive kin and the relatives or fictive kin move to another county

(a.) Once notified that the placement provider will be moving to another county, the county child welfare agency with custody and placement responsibility shall immediately contact the child welfare agency in the county where the relatives or fictive kin will be relocating. The county child welfare agency with custody and placement authority shall request an updated provider assessment. (b.) The new county child welfare agency shall complete a new provider assessment within five business days. (c.) A new DSS-1797 shall be completed and returned to the county child welfare agency with custody and placement responsibility. C. Providing Services When Multiple Counties are Involved 1.) Placement of a child out of county (a.) Although it is policy and best practice to place a child within his or her own county and his or her own community, it is sometimes necessary to place the child with an unlicensed relative or other court-approved placement provider. When a child is placed out of the county with a relative or other court-approved placement provider: (i.) Prior notice to the other county child welfare agency of the impending placement is required. A child shall not be placed in another county without prior notification to that county child welfare agency. (ii.) In cases that the county with legal custody of the child desires to place the child(ren) in a kinship placement in another county at the time of removal, the county child welfare agency with legal custody of the child shall make a request to the county child welfare agency where the potential kinship care provider resides for an Initial Provider Assessment and criminal history check of the potential safety providers. This shall be completed prior to the placement of the child. The county child welfare agency conducting the provider assessment shall complete the Initial Provider Assessment and criminal history check within one business day. If the Initial Provider Assessment or criminal history check documents safety concerns about the proposed provider, placement of the child shall not occur.

(iii.) If the results of the Initial Provider Assessment and criminal record check are favorable, the county child welfare agency with legal custody of the child(ren) has responsibility for quarterly face-to face contacts with the child and placement provider. The county child welfare agency where the kinship care placement is located will follow up with the comprehensive kinship care assessment, will provide any required contacts, and will provide documentation of contacts to the placing county child welfare agency on a monthly basis. (iv.) The county child welfare agency that has legal custody of the child(ren) shall send all pertinent documentation regarding the child to the county child welfare agency where the placement provider resides within five business days. Documentation shall include case narrative, copies of the juvenile petition, nonsecure custody court order, Structured Decision-Making tools, and the Family Services Agreement. (v.) If the court in the county assuming custody of the child(ren) orders immediate placement with a relative or fictive kin in the other county upon issuance of the nonsecure custody court order, the county child welfare agency obtaining custody of the child shall immediately notify the county child welfare agency where the placement provider resides. (vi.) Whenever possible, there should be careful planning for placement of a child with a relative or fictive kin. It may be that the child is already in a placement with a relative or fictive kin who may be a potential placement provider and resides in another county. When there is more time for assessment, the county child welfare agency with legal custody should request a Provider Assessment (both initial and comprehensive) and any home study that is requested by its court. These assessments must be completed prior to placement of the child. (vii.) The Inter-County Agreement, DSS-1797, shall be completed at the time of placement. The DSS-1797 assists county child welfare agencies with the determination of responsibilities while the child(ren) is in that placement. The agreement should also indicate the timeframes for the sharing of documentation. The DSS-1797 shall also describe what should happen should the placement disrupt. If the DSS-1797 is not completed and signed, the placement of the child shall not occur. (viii.) There are times when the best placement for a child in the custody and placement authority of a county child welfare agency is a licensed family foster home, therapeutic family foster home, group home, or institution located in another county. The Inter-County Agreement, DSS-1797, shall be completed at the time of placement. The DSS-1797 assists county child welfare agencies with the determination of responsibilities while the child is in that placement. The agreement should also indicate the timeframes for the sharing of documentation. (c.) The county child welfare worker shall have face-to-face contact with the child(ren) at least monthly. The county child welfare agency shall have more frequent contact when indicated by the child(ren)’s needs. The need for less frequent contact must be documented in writing and the documentation should include the level of contact expected. The county child welfare agency where the placement provider is located may serve as the monthly contact for the child(ren)’s resident county. (d.) There shall be monthly contact with the placement provider in reference to the child(ren)’s needs and progress which shall be documented in the child(ren)’s record. Documentation shall reflect diligent efforts made to contact. (e.) In cases where a contractual party is conducting the required contacts, the county child welfare agency shall request regular status reports and have face-to-face contact with the child(ren) at least once a quarter, or there shall be documentation to reflect efforts made or rationale for not making the contact. 2.) Collaboration among county child welfare agencies in out-of-home placement cases Collaboration among all county child welfare agencies involved in a Child Placement Services case is essential to providing continuity and stability for children and families during the times they most need it. County child welfare agencies must facilitate the transfer of information about the family from one to the other in a timely manner. A thorough transfer of information between county child welfare workers is critical. Sharing information also helps the child placement worker in developing a timely Out-of-Home Family Services Agreement for the family and a parallel legal plan for achieving safety and permanence for the child(ren) within one year. Whenever a Child Placement Services case is transferred, a transitional face-to-face visit with the child(ren) and his or her placement provider should be planned with both county child welfare workers present to allow for the child(ren) and placement provider to be introduced to the new worker. This same kind of face-to-face meeting should be arranged with the child’s birth family if the plan continues to be reunification in order for the family to be introduced to the new county child welfare worker. Using the DSS-1797, county child welfare agencies will negotiate who makes contacts with the respective individuals in their counties, and who documents or completes various pieces of the required tools. VII. The county child welfare agency that had custody of the child prior to the finalization of the adoption maintains responsibility for Adoption Assistance until adoption assistance issues are resolved. (b.) If the county child welfare agency that had custody of the child(ren) prior to the finalization of adoption decides that it is in the best interest of the child to return to that county, the county child welfare agencies should work together to plan for this. It is important to remember that best practice dictates the county child welfare agency that had custody prior to the finalization share all case information deemed important by the county child welfare agency where the child(ren) and adoptive family reside in providing supportive services to the child and placement resources. (c.) If the child is placed in a residential facility, detention facility, hospital, or other treatment facility in another county (not the placing county child welfare agency and not the county child welfare agency where the adoptive parents reside) and the adoptive parents abandon the child, follow the guidelines in this section regarding the assessment of CPS reports involving more than one county. The county child welfare agency responsible for initiating the CPS Assessment in this situation will be the county where the facility is located. However, the county child welfare agency where the adoptive parents reside is considered by statute as the county of residence for the child. The resident county child welfare agency will be the county child welfare agency responsible for conducting the CPS Assessment and for filing a juvenile petition, as well as a request for nonsecure custody, if warranted. The resident county child welfare agency has overall responsibility for the case including case management, financial responsibility for child placement services, and adoption assistance if the child is readopted. (d.) If the child(ren)'s residence with the adoptive parents is in another state but the child is in a placement in North Carolina and the adoptive parents abandon the child(ren), the county child welfare agency where the child(ren) is found is responsible for the child's safety and maintains responsibility for placement. This county child welfare agency maintains this responsibility until the state of residence agrees to accept jurisdiction. If a North Carolina county child welfare agency placed the child(ren), they continue to be responsible for Adoption Assistance for the child(ren). 2). That county child welfare agency may request that the county child welfare agency where the child(ren) and adoptive family reside assist by actually removing the child(ren) from the placement. However, the county child welfare agency that has custody of the child(ren) is responsible for transporting the child(ren) to the new placement. In many instances, the county child welfare agency that had been supervising the adoptive placement may have provided significant contact and services to the child(ren) during the placement. The two county child welfare agencies may jointly decide that both county child welfare workers need to accompany the child(ren) to the new placement in order to minimize further trauma. This decision should be based on the needs of the child(ren). The county where the child(ren) resides with the adoptive family is responsible for ensuring the child(ren)'s safety until the county child welfare agency with legal custody moves the child(ren) to the new placement. The DSS-1797 shall detail the responsibility of each county child welfare agency involved should a disruption occur. The original county child welfare agency shall ensure that notice of the hearing to transfer venue is served on the county child welfare agency proposed to receive venue so that it is afforded an opportunity to be present at the hearing and to present any arguments against changing venue or send written consents. 2.) The Compact is the best means to ensure protection and services to children who are placed across state lines for child placement services or adoption. The Compact is a legally and administratively sound means of placing children across states lines with the same safeguards and services as are available when they are placed within their own state. The Compact provides the means for securing an evaluation of a prospective placement before the child is sent outside the state and provides assurance that the sending state retains jurisdiction over the child sufficient to ensure that the child receives adequate care and protection. PURPOSE Child Protective Services are federally mandated; however, North Carolina (NC) remains one of the few states that administer its child welfare system at the county level. These federally mandated services are applicable to the entire state without consideration to county lines. The North Carolina Division of Social Services (Division) recognizes that all children in NC have the right to live free of abuse and neglect without regard to where they live or with whom they live. Therefore, all 100 counties in NC bear the responsibility for ensuring the safety and well-being of all children and their families. The primary purpose of this policy is to avoid conflicts of interest or the potential for the appearance of conflicts of interest. It was developed in collaboration with the NC Association of County Directors of Social Services Children’s Services Committee to provide guidance to county child welfare agencies on managing conflicts of interest. County child welfare agencies should develop Memoranda of Understanding (MOU) between partner county child welfare agencies, as well as case-specific Memoranda of Agreement to address the needs of individual county child welfare systems. An example of a MOU can be found at the end of this policy. When the delivery of child welfare services involves multiple counties, it is expected that each county child welfare agency work in a collaborative and coordinated manner to provide greater continuity of services to families while providing stability and ensuring safety for children. Each community is best able to identify, build, and make the most of existing resources to assist families. All efforts should be made to resolve disagreements related to the identification of and the provision of services to families where a Conflict of Interest (COI) or a perceived Conflict of Interest (COI) exists. These efforts should include involving county child welfare agency management up through and including directors in the attempt to reach a resolution. This policy addresses COI cases only. It does not cover every conceivable situation that may arise and nothing in this policy alters any of the required activities to complete the child welfare services activities that are outlined in NC child welfare law, rule, and policy.

If a family changes residence to a new county at any time during a CPS Assessment, the child welfare agency conducting the assessment will not change until a case decision is made. If there is a finding of “services needed” or a substantiation, then the new resident child welfare agency shall provide CPS In-Home Services as defined In-Home Services in the NC Child welfare manual for further information concerning this instance. When conducting a COI assessment, a partner county agency may request assistance from additional partner agencies if needed. 3. Responsibilities of the Resident Child Welfare Agency a. When a resident county child welfare agency needs a partner agency to conduct a CPS Assessment, the resident child welfare agency is responsible for contacting the partner child welfare agency in person or via telephone immediately upon receipt of the report. It is not appropriate to make this contact via email or fax. The resident child welfare agency is responsible for determining if a COI exists and to assess any immediate safety concerns of the child and to ensure the safety of the child, if needed, prior to the partner child welfare agency beginning the ongoing assessment. b. It is the responsibility of the resident child welfare agency to make available all pertinent information provided during CPS Intake by the reporter immediately via fax or encrypted email. This will need to occur within two hours so that the report can be screened within that period. c. A completed CPS Structured Intake Form shall include all of the information provided by the reporter; any information that may be needed by the partner child welfare agency to appropriately screen the report; the CPS Intake worker’s name and designation; the supervisor’s name and designation who was responsible for the decision to classify the report as a COI; and the reporter’s name and contact information when they wish to be notified of screening and case outcome. The CPS Structured Intake Form should include a brief description of the conflict of interest. If COI is a foster parent supervised by the resident county, the contact information for the licensing social worker should be included.

- d. Arrangements shall be made by the resident agency to ensure initiation of the report by the after-hours worker of the partner child welfare agency if after normal business hours. When there is an immediate safety concern for a child, the resident county child welfare agency should screen and initiate the COI report. It is the responsibility of the resident child welfare agency to staff and provide dictation and documentation within 72 hours of all the information gathered during case initiation when the resident child welfare agency has ensured the safety of the child.
- e. When a COI is uncovered during case initiation or at any time during the CPS Assessment prior to a partner child welfare agency accepting responsibility for the COI case, it is the responsibility of the resident child welfare agency to staff and provide documentation within 72 hours of all the information gathered thus far.
- f. The RIL judicial review must take place in the county where the abuse or serious neglect arose, regardless of which county child welfare agency made the RIL finding.
- g. In cases involving foster homes supervised by a county child welfare agency, the licensing social worker should accompany the partner child welfare agency social worker in a face-to-face contact to explain the case decision. If the visit is not made jointly, the licensing worker shall make contact as soon as possible to explain the implications for the foster home's license as outlined in Foster Home Licensing in the NC Child welfare manual.
- h. If at any point including CPS Assessments, CPS In-Home Services, and/or Child Placement Services, the resident county child welfare agency is involved with conducting case activities, the resident county child welfare agency will use the partner county's SIS ID on its Day Sheets, even if the resident county child welfare agency has a SIS ID for the child/children.

4. Assuming Placement in COI Cases

If placement becomes necessary during a CPS Assessment, all required activities shall be completed to comply with laws N.C.G.S. § 7B Article 5, N.C.G.S. § 7B-302, in rule 10A NCAC 70A .0110, and detailed in Assessments in the NC Child welfare manual. Once a case decision has been made to transfer the case to CPS In-Home Services, the case should be reviewed to assess the ongoing need to continue assistance by a partner county child welfare agency. The partner county child welfare agencies will continue to utilize its current SIS ID and maintain the DSS-5027. 3. With the COI in mind, NC family-centered practice dictates that the partner county child welfare agency should coordinate the CFT and provision of services with the parent and the child with input from the resident county child welfare agency, when appropriate. 3. If the child has been placed with a Temporary Safety Provider by the parent due a safety issue, case closure should not be considered until the child is able to safely return home. Consideration should be given to the filing of a petition to ensure safety and establish legal permanence by the partner county child welfare agency. If this becomes necessary, information should be provided to the resident county child welfare agency to a supervisor or higher level, unless there is an immediate need. B. COI Identified During CPS In-Home Services 1. County child welfare agencies should understand that when the COI arises during the provision of CPS In-Home Services, the resident county child welfare agency will not retain the case. The partner county child welfare agency will provide case management services as outlined in In-Home Services in the NC Child welfare manual. 2. The partner child welfare agency will respond to the COI request within 24 hours. 3. A CFT shall be scheduled per " Child and Family Team Meetings" in Cross Function Topics in the NC Child welfare manual within 72 hours of any major case event or family life event to address the change in situation and to ensure that the family is as informed as possible concerning the ongoing case status and case management. Those included in the meeting should include, but are not limited to, the resident child welfare agency worker and the partner child welfare agency worker.

Risk & Use of Assessment Tools

Policy
The primary concern of Child Welfare Services is protecting child(ren) from maltreatment.
Definition
Risk is the likelihood that a child(ren) will be harmed (abused or neglected). Safety threats are a subset of risk that represent the likelihood of immediate or imminent serious harm to the child(ren). Risk: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Occurs on a continuum from mild to severe;• Includes family situations and behaviors from onset progressing into seriously troubled;• Applies to aspects of family life relevant to understanding the likelihood of maltreatment;• Impacts child(ren) well-being and safety;• Is based on an unlimited time frame (could occur any time in the future);• Is associated with family functioning and behaviors that need to be managed or treated; and• Requires a judgement about the negative effects on the child(ren) from future maltreatment. Risk assessment is an ongoing process to determine the probability of future harm to the child(ren). It does not predict when or how serious the harm may be, but rather the likelihood that harm will occur. Risk assessment, based on an examination of factors, attempts to address whether the harm may continue and whether the harm is acute or chronic in nature. It is used as a vehicle for decision making in child maltreatment cases. The risk scales are based on research on cases with “substantiated” abuse or neglect or “services needed” findings that examined the relationships between family characteristics and the outcomes of subsequent abuse and/or neglect. The scales do not predict recurrence; simply the likelihood that a family will have another incident without intervention by the county child welfare services agency. “Protective capacity” is defined as the ability and willingness to mitigate or ameliorate the identified safety and risk concerns. Protective capacity can be demonstrated by a parent through their statements, actions, and reactions. Protective capacity exists both within the parent/caretaker and within the family environment.

MONITORING AND ASSESSING RISK Risk assessment is an ongoing process that starts at the time a case is accepted for a CPS-A and continues until case closure. County child welfare efforts must assess the risk and develop a plan to reduce the risk to an acceptable level with a focus on maintaining the child(ren) in the family home. When assessing for risk, county child welfare workers must observe and document the impact of maltreatment on the child(ren). The worker must use objective language to document the child(ren)'s behavior or condition and relate that behavior or condition to the identified maltreatment. ASSESSMENT TOOLS The following assessment tools must be completed accurately and thoroughly, approved, and signed within the timeframes indicated in the appropriate functional protocol: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Safety Assessment DSS-5231 (Assessments), • Risk Assessment DSS-5230 (Assessments), • Risk Reassessment DSS-5230 (In-Home), 	When assessing risk, a county child welfare services agency should consider: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • CPS history, how long has risk been occurring; • Parent/caretaker's reaction to and/or explanation regarding the risk (what was the parent/caretaker's intent?); • Related criminal history; • Parent/caretaker's willingness to engage and/or agreement with safety and risk planning, (what is the parent's/caretaker's attitude?); • How severe the potential risk is to the child(ren); • What is the impact of the potential risk on the child(ren)? • What is the degree of change needed by the parent(s)/caretaker(s) to remediate the risk? • What is the timeframe within which the risk is likely to occur? • What is the protective capacity of the parents/caretakers to address the identified risk? Families should be involved in the completion of all the assessment tools used by the county child welfare services agency. While the approach is family-centered, decisions regarding the risk, needs, and strengths are the responsibility of the county child welfare services agency. The outcome of any decision should not be surprising to the family if the county child welfare worker has successfully involved family members. IMPACT ON CHILDREN When assessing for risk, county child welfare workers should be alert for conditions, behaviors, and reactions in child(ren) that indicate an impact from maltreatment. In some cases, the impact may be directly and clearly related to the maltreatment, including but not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Bruising, burns, bites or broken bones from abuse or neglect; • Medical conditions caused by a lack of medical care; and/or • Exposure to an unsafe condition (e.g., young child running across busy street due to lack of supervision).

Does the victim align with the batterer? • Does the parent/caretaker actively engage in a plan to protect the child from further harm? Is the plan workable? • Does the parent/caretaker demonstrate actions that are consistent with verbal intent, or are their words and actions contradictory? Environmental Protective Capacities While the assessment of the parent/caretaker’s protective capacities is critical, an assessment of environmental capacities may also mitigate the safety concerns/risk of harm to a child. Below are several categories of environmental protective capacities to be considered. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Family/kinship relationships that contribute to the protection of the child; • Informal relationships; • Agency supports; • Community supports; • Financial status; • Spiritual supports; • For American Indians, the tribe; and • Concrete needs being met (e.g., for food, clothing, shelter). Scaling is a great way to assess risk with a parent/caretaker. When using scaling questions, the county child welfare worker needs to anchor the scale with specific descriptors for high and low numbers. The county child welfare worker should plan to ask follow-up questions. Identifying the number is just the beginning; the real value of scaling is in the follow-up questions. What does the parent/caretaker think makes it that number? What’s one thing they could do to lower the risk?

Collateral Contacts

Legal Basis
N.C.G.S. § 7B-302(c) states: “in performing any duties related to the assessment of the complaint or the provision or arrangement of social services, the director may consult with any public or private agencies or individuals, including the available state or local law enforcement officers who shall assist in the assessment and evaluation of the seriousness of any report of abuse, neglect, or dependency when requested by the director. The director or the director’s representative may make a written demand for any information or reports, whether confidential, that may, in the director’s opinion, be relevant to the protective services case. Upon the director’s or the director’s representative’s request and unless protected by the attorney-client privilege, any public or private agency or individual shall provide access to and copies of this confidential information and these records to the extent permitted by federal law and regulations.”

Diligent Efforts

Legal Basis
10A NCAC 70A.0105 regarding children states: “The director shall make diligent efforts to locate the alleged victim child or children until such efforts are successful or until the director concludes that the child or children cannot be located. Performance Measurement – CPS Assessment
The Child and Family and Family Services Review (CFSR) and the On-Site Review Instrument (OSRI) measure whether the county child welfare worker met state requirements for making face to face contacts with children during agency involvement with the family throughout the life of the case. Specifically, Safety Outcome, Item 1 looks at if the county child welfare agency worker initiated a CPS Assessment according to state policy, and if not, why the initiation did not occur timely. Documentation for timely initiation is through entry of the DSS-5104, Field 6A – DILIGENT EFFORTS REASON. Failure to document a valid reason for not making timely initiation may impact the achievement of safety. Valid reasons for untimely initiation are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Unable to Initiate Timely Despite Daily Diligent Efforts, through a variety of methods • Unable to Initiate Timely, Diligent Efforts not met • Unable to Initiate Timely Despite Daily Diligent Efforts, due to family out of State • Unable to Initiate Timely Due to Natural Disaster

INTRODUCTION The provision of child welfare services is frequently enhanced by the involvement of the court system. However, invoking the jurisdiction of the court system into a child welfare case is not a measure to be taken by the agency without careful consideration and planning. This careful consideration and planning must take into account that the juvenile court process can be seen as an adversarial process and so it requires strong collaboration between the agency, the family, the service providers, and the court system. This duality of adversity and collaboration exists to serve the best interest of all parties involved by protecting the rights of both children and their parents and by holding the community accountable to serve the best interest of its families. Protecting the safety, well-being, and permanence of children is not only the role of the agency but of the community, including the court system. The court system also plays a critical role in meeting the eligibility requirements of several funding sources that are essential to meeting the needs of North Carolina’s children. Even though the juvenile court process can be adversarial in nature, staff from county child welfare agencies are strongly encouraged to use these principles to guide every interaction with every person the staff member encounters throughout the court process. This includes the judge, the family and the children, the agency’s attorney, the parent’s attorney, the Guardian ad Litem volunteer and the attorney advocate, the bailiff or sheriff’s deputy, and any other court personnel. Specifically, maintaining professional relationships with parents’ attorneys and attorney advocates in this process models for families and demonstrates to the court that partnerships are valued despite differences each group may have. Albeit only a small piece of the equation, these interactions can become a part of the teaching process to help families successfully navigate the child welfare system.

Juvenile Court

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
To solidify these principles into everyday practice, agencies are strongly encouraged to develop a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) or a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with their local court system to help establish a collaborative relationship between all the participants within the court process and can be used as the basis to establish local court rules and procedures. These memoranda can also help to improve outcomes of safety, permanence, and well-being of abused, neglected, and/or dependent children in the court system by increasing timely decisions and resolution of juvenile court cases and to conduct more meaningful, thorough hearings. When used as a “living document” these memoranda can help to identify trends which impact outcomes for children and their families and develop responsive strategies and highlight those training activities needed to enhance overall best practices in child welfare and juvenile court. The court process, from the first hearing to the final disposition, is critical to the achievement of a timely, appropriate, permanent plan for children. II. PURPOSE AND PHILOSOPHY The juvenile court is a branch of the district court whose primary function is the hearing, evaluation, and disposition of cases involving children alleged to be delinquent, undisciplined, abused, neglected, and/or dependent. In abuse, neglect, and dependency proceedings involving county child welfare agencies, juvenile court represents the power of the State to act in the best interests of children under 18 years of age. Thorough respect for this power and an understanding of the juvenile court’s complex process is critical to the child welfare professional’s success and efficacy in keeping children and their families safe. Within North Carolina’s 100 counties, there are 42 separate judicial districts. Thus, several counties may be encompassed within a single court jurisdiction. A map overlaying North Carolina’s 42 District Courts with its 100 counties may be found at http://www.nccourts.org/Courts/Trial/District/Documents/DistrictCourtmap15.pdf.

This chapter is intended to be a comprehensive examination of the role of the juvenile court in North Carolina’s child welfare cases. However, recognizing that each case presents its own unique characteristics, workers are strongly encouraged to seek clarifications when needed from their supervisor, from their agency’s child welfare leadership, from their agency’s legal counsel, or from the North Carolina Division of Social Services. THE “LIFE” AND “TIMES” OF A JUVENILE COURT CASE From the first filing of a petition through permanence, each case takes on a certain “life” and while each jurisdiction may have practices that are specific to that court, in general juvenile court cases follow a prescribed path. Just as with juvenile court terminology, developing an understanding of the path of the case will assist child welfare staff in becoming more comfortable and confident in working with the court system. Perhaps one of the best examinations of the “life” of a juvenile court case is found in Chapter 4 of the text entitled Working with the Courts in Child Protection found at: http://www.childwelfare.gov/pubs/usermanuals/courts/courts.pdf. Written by The Honorable William G. Jones, a retired family court judge who served 25 years for the Mecklenburg County District Court, that manual (along with the entire Child Abuse and Neglect User Manual Series) is available online for viewing, download and printing from the Child Welfare Information Gateway at: https://www.childwelfare.gov/pubs/usermanuals/. Counties are strongly encouraged to have all workers that participate in juvenile court proceedings read and regularly refer to Judge Jones’ text. Additionally, counties shall, throughout the life of an agency’s involvement with families, consistently explore with the family any American Indian heritage that family may have. It is critical for agencies to understand that at any point a family identifies the child as an American Indian Child of a federally recognized tribe, the agency is required to follow all provisions clearly outlined in the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978. In discussing the tribe’s jurisdiction over child custody proceedings involving an Indian child the Act reads:

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
An Indian tribe shall have jurisdiction exclusive as to any State over any child custody proceeding involving an Indian child who resides or is domiciled within the reservation of such tribe, except where such jurisdiction is otherwise vested in the State by existing Federal law. Where an Indian child is a ward of a tribal court, the Indian tribe shall retain exclusive jurisdiction, notwithstanding the residence or domicile of the child. In discussing the tribe’s ability to intervene in the court’s proceeding, the Act goes on to read, “In any State court proceeding for the foster care placement of, or termination of parental rights to, an Indian child, the Indian custodian of the child and the Indian child’s tribe shall have a right to intervene at any point in the proceeding.” A tool that can assist counties in following these provisions is the ICWA Checklist (DSS-5291). This tool is useful in documenting the ongoing efforts made in determining American Indian Ancestry, the efforts made to prevent the breakup of an American Indian Family, tribal notification and involvement as well as the family’s placement preferences. Just as with the “life” of a juvenile court case, from the first filing of a petition through permanence each case has certain “times” in which the various parts of the case must take place. In trainings provided to GAL Attorney Advocates, Deana Fleming, Associate Legal Counsel with the Administrative Office of the Courts, provides this examination of the timeframes that a typical court case follows: Juvenile Court Case Statutory Timeline <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Day 0 - Juvenile Petition (AOC-J-130) and Nonsecure Custody Order (AOC-J-150) filed. • Day 7 - Initial hearing to determine need for continued nonsecure custody as per N.C.G.S. § 7B-506(a) which may be continued for up to ten business days by consent; subsequent hearings within seven business days and then 30 calendar day intervals as per N.C.G.S. § 7B-506(e). • Day 60 -Adjudicatory hearing no later than 60 days from filing as per N.C.G.S. § 7B-801 unless continued as per N.C.G.S. § 7B-803.

JUVENILE COURT RELATED TRAININGS Training is an essential key to the success of the county child welfare worker and to the agency as a whole in work, they do with families and their communities. Attendance at trainings, both internal and external, on the various issues related to the juvenile court process will enhance the worker’s understanding of this complex system. To facilitate on-going professional development in this area, agencies are strongly encouraged to develop regular internal trainings related to the juvenile court process in general and on matters that may be specific to that agency’s court district. These in-service trainings could include presentations from the agency’s legal representative, from the district’s judicial leadership, from court personnel, from the local Guardian ad Litem office, or from the local bar association. Information presented in these trainings could include issues such as testifying in court, understanding evidentiary standards, courtroom etiquette, court roles and responsibilities, etc. Offering joint trainings that include agency staff members, Guardian ad Litem

Locations, training dates, and registration information related to these trainings and any other training offered by the North Carolina Division of Social Services can be accessed anytime at https://www.ncswlearn.org, a learning website for North Carolina's human services professionals hosted by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Social Work. Legal Aspects of Child Welfare in North Carolina is mandatory for all child welfare staff (including supervisors) employed in a county child welfare agency within the first year of employment. The prerequisite for this training is Child Welfare in North Carolina (or completion of other required pre-service training required based upon date of employment and functional responsibilities). This training is a two-day foundation curriculum designed to provide child welfare services staff with legal information that will help them understand the role of the juvenile court in protecting abused, neglected, and/or dependent children, as well as the need to respect parents’ rights through the use of family centered practice techniques. Financial and Legal Aspects of Adoptions is a two-day specialized training, which covers the financial and legal components of the adoption process. The curriculum focuses on the framework of the Adoption Assistance benefit program and the statutory requirements of adoption in North Carolina. The North Carolina Division of Social Services in collaboration with the North Carolina Attorney General’s Office developed this training. This course is open to child welfare social workers and supervisors employed in county child welfare agencies, as well as staff from private adoption agencies. This course is not mandatory for child welfare staff from county child welfare agencies. However, completion of the course does count towards the 24 hours of continuing education required annually following the first year of employment.

IV-E: An Overview is a one-day specialized curriculum focusing on the laws and policies regarding IV-E funding for children in custody or placement responsibility of county child welfare agencies. Topics covered include the importance of IV-E funding, court requirements, required court language, documentation, and eligibility and redetermination requirements. Due to the nature of this one-day training event, county staff are strongly encouraged to direct any case and county specific questions related to IV-E to the Children’s Program Representative (CPR) or the Local Business Liaison (LBL). This course is open to staff and supervisors employed in a NC county child welfare agency in the areas of Income Maintenance, Work First, CPS Intake, CPS Assessments, CPS Occasional On-Call, CPS In-Home Services, Child Placement including Independent Living (LINKS), Foster Home Licensing, or Adoptions or individuals or agencies contracting with a county child welfare agency to provide any of those services (this does not include staff from private foster care / adoption agencies or private residential care agencies). Completion of this course counts towards the annual requirement of 24 hours of continuing education. VI. INVOKING THE JURISDICTION OF THE JUVENILE COURT As stated previously, the act of filing a petition is a serious decision. Except for cases in which the immediate safety of the child(ren) would be compromised, a Child and Family Team (CFT) meeting shall be held before any court action is taken. If this is not possible due to an urgent need to remove the child(ren) in order to maintain safety, then the CFT meeting shall be held as soon after the removal as possible. This is an opportunity to bring the family, along with both formal and informal supports to the table to make a plan to keep the child(ren) safe, in his or her community, without court intervention. For more detailed information on conducting CFT meetings, refer to Child and Family Team Meetings. A county child welfare agency may invoke the jurisdiction of the juvenile court in these situations related to child welfare: refusal to cooperate with or obstruction of a CPS Assessment, and request to adjudicate a child as abused, neglected, and/or dependent. The filing of a petition requesting adjudication of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency can be done for various reasons including the family’s unwillingness to accept critically needed services, safety-related circumstances that

necessitate the need for immediate removal, and despite agency efforts to provide services the family has made no progress towards providing adequate care for the child. This chapter will examine each of these three areas in general and will explore some of the issues related to the filing of a petition. A. REFUSAL TO COOPERATE WITH / OBSTRUCTION OF A CPS ASSESSMENT If, at any point during the CPS Assessment process, any person obstructs or interferes with the CPS Assessment, the director may file a Petition: Obstruction of or Interference with Juvenile Investigation (AOC-J-120) and a Juvenile Summons and Notice of Hearing for Obstruction of or Interference with Juvenile Investigation (AOC-J-121) naming that person as a respondent and requesting an order directing that person to cease such obstruction or interference. For purposes of this section, the person obstructing the CPS Assessment is not limited only to a parent or family member. The petition must first provide sufficient evidence to demonstrate that the allegations outlined in the report would meet one or more of the definitions under NCGS § 7B-101 before proceeding to evidence of the person’s conduct that constitutes obstruction or interference. When this evidence is established, then evidence of the person’s obstruction or interference should be specifically stated and verified. At this point, the court may issue an Ex Parte Order to Cease Obstruction of or Interference with Juvenile Investigation (AOC-J-122). It is vitally important that a thorough interview is conducted during CPS Intake, and that the interview solicits sufficient information to make a clear-cut screening decision as to whether the allegations reported meet at least one of the legal definitions of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency. The use of the structured CPS Structured Intake Form (DSS-1402) ensures that thorough, pertinent information is obtained, while the Structured Intake screening (refer to Intake in the NC Child Welfare manual) tools serve to guide screening decisions that are based on statutory definitions. N.C.G.S. § 7B-303 prohibits any person from obstructing or interfering with a CPS Assessment. Interference means refusing to disclose the whereabouts of the juvenile, refusing to allow access to the juvenile, refusing to allow the agency representative to observe or interview the juvenile in private, refusing to allow the agency representative to arrange for an evaluation of the juvenile by a

physician or other expert, or other conduct that makes it impossible for the agency representative to carry out his duty to assess the child's safety. When a person or entity interferes with the CPS Assessment process, it is the worker’s obligation to adequately explain the need to thoroughly complete the assessment in order to ascertain the safety and well-being of the child(ren). It is the Division’s position that the provision of Child Protective Services, including visiting and interviewing the child in his or her home, with the parent’s permission does not infringe upon Fourth Amendment rights. Securing parental consent to interview the child is vital. Efforts to secure voluntary consent shall never be coercive. The worker shall explain his or her role and express a desire to interview the child in order to assess safety, risk, and the strengths and needs of the family. It is important to remember that the ability to interview children at school or at childcare centers has not been compromised – schools and childcare centers are not private residences. Family-centered practice and the concept of involving parents and both their formal and informal supports in decision-making throughout service provision can be challenging at times. It is important to remember that every interaction with the family and those supports is an opportunity to make a connection. Take the time to engage the family and the individuals that comprise the family’s support network, recognize the strengths, help with transitions, provide choices, pay attention to the words used when interacting with families, and make an effort to act as a change agent, rather than an authority figure. Family members and their supports should be made to feel their involvement and participation throughout the life of the case is crucial and that their feedback is valued. Despite a worker’s best efforts towards family centered practice, there will be instances where a county child welfare agency must file an obstruction or interference petition in order to proceed with the CPS Assessment required in the provision of Child Protective Services. If the family or person interfering with or obstructing the CPS Assessment is still unwilling to cooperate, he or she should be informed of the law and the potential outcomes of the filing of a petition in court. If necessary, the agency director or the designee can file a petition so that the court can hear the

allegations and order the cessation of the obstruction. At the obstruction or interference hearing, all relevant information from the CPS report should be presented. The agency must demonstrate to the judge that the decision to initiate a CPS Assessment met the statutory threshold for abuse, neglect, and/or dependency. In determining what information from the CPS report is relevant, it is helpful to think in broad terms. The reporter’s identity remains confidential. However, the judge may order disclosure of the reporter during the hearing. If the director believes the child(ren) is in immediate danger, he or she may seek an ex parte order. A detailed description of this procedure is outlined below. B. REQUEST TO ADJUDICATE A CHILD AS ABUSED, NEGLECTED, AND/OR DEPENDENT 1. Unwillingness to Accept Critically Needed Services When an allegation is substantiated or a finding of Services Needed is made, some families may refuse to follow through with services that are needed to keep the family intact. Other families may participate only marginally, receiving virtually no benefits from the process. In such situations, the agency shall document its efforts to gain cooperative participation from the family. If such efforts are not successful, this documentation shall be included with a petition to the court to order family participation in services. Just as when considering an obstruction or interference petition, agencies shall use the family-centered practice Principles of Partnership to engage the family in a discussion of the need for the parents or caretakers to accept these critical services for either themselves or their children. Listening to the parents or caretakers about their thoughts, feelings, and concerns related to receiving these services and providing an open and honest discussion aimed at assisting the parents or caretakers in working through these issues may eliminate the need to proceed with filing a juvenile petition. If filing a juvenile petition is necessary and upon an adjudication finding that the juvenile is abused, neglected, and/or dependent, N.C.G.S. § 7B-904 provides for a special dispositional hearing to determine whether the court shall order the parents, custodian, or guardian to participate with the child or children in medical, psychiatric, psychological, or other treatment. The statute outlines the authority of the court to require the caretaker to undergo treatment or counseling aimed at remediating or remedying behaviors or conditions that led or contributed to

the juvenile being adjudicated as abused, neglected, and/or dependent or that led or contributed to the court’s decision to remove custody from the caretaker. 2. Safety Related Circumstances Indicating the Need for Immediate Removal Sometimes the risk to the safety of a child is so great that the agency must protect the child by removing the child from the home. Voluntary Placement Agreements are not appropriate for use in this situation. Removal of the child is most often accomplished through the filing of a Juvenile Petition (AOC-J130) with either the local clerk of court’s office or when the clerk’s office is closed, with the local magistrate’s office (as per N.C.G.S. § 7B-404). N.C.G.S. § 7B-500(a) permits the county child welfare worker to take temporary physical custody without a court order if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the juvenile is abused, neglected, and/or dependent and that the child would be injured or could not be taken into custody if it were first necessary to obtain a court order. This same statute permits the county child welfare worker to arrange for the placement, care, supervision, and transportation of the juvenile while in the temporary custody of the worker. Upon notification by the county child welfare worker, the agency director or the designee determines whether to file a petition for nonsecure custody in accordance with N.C.G.S. § 7B-502. If no petition is filed, the child(ren) must be returned to the parent from whom he or she was removed. When taking a juvenile into temporary custody, the agency shall: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Notify the parent, guardian or custodian that the juvenile has been taken into custody and advise the caretaker of the right to be present with the juvenile until a determination is made of the need for nonsecure custody (Worker must make every reasonable effort to notify the caretaker. However, failure to notify the caretaker that the juvenile is in temporary custody shall not be grounds for release of the juvenile.), • Release the juvenile to the parent, guardian or custodian when the need for custody no longer exists, or

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • File a petition within 12 hours and obtain an order from the district court judge for nonsecure custody if the need for nonsecure custody exists. • Make diligent efforts to identify and notify adult relatives and other persons with legal custody of a sibling of the juvenile within 30 days after the initial order removing custody. All information regarding attempts must be filed with the court. 3. Despite Agency Efforts to Provide Services, No Progress Has Been Made Toward Providing Adequate Care for the Child Despite an agency’s best efforts to engage the family and coordinate the necessary remedial services during the provision of CPS In-Home Services, families may not make sufficient and timely progress in addressing the issues that led to the child abuse, neglect, and/or dependency. In these cases, the agency can file a petition alleging that the child is abused, neglected, and/or dependent. It is important to note that a petition may be filed asking for an adjudication of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency even when the agency is not seeking removal of the child(ren) from the legal custody of the parent, guardian, or custodian. This may be the case when dealing with families who, despite diligent efforts made by the agency, remain uncooperative and refuse to work with the agency but the child(ren) is determined to remain safe in his or her home. The Juvenile Petition (AOC-J-130) filed by county child welfare agencies in this situation is the same petition filed when the agency is requesting custody. The petition is filed without an Order for Nonsecure Custody (AOC-J-150). This is a matter that is outlined in N.C.G.S. § 7B-302(c) which reads: If the assessment indicates that abuse, neglect, or dependency has occurred, the director shall decide whether immediate removal of the juvenile or any other juveniles in the home is necessary for their protection. If immediate removal does not seem necessary, the director shall immediately provide or arrange for protective services. If the parent, guardian, custodian, or caretaker refuses to accept the protective services provided or arranged by the director, the director shall sign a complaint seeking to invoke the jurisdiction of the court for the protection of the juvenile or juveniles.

Once abuse, neglect, and/or dependency has been adjudicated, the judge may order the parents or caretaker to take certain steps to remediate the behaviors or conditions that led to the filing of the petition. If the child(ren) has already been adjudicated abused, neglected, and/or dependent and, at a later date, the agency decides that nonsecure custody is necessary to protect the child(ren), the agency shall insure that the nonsecure custody order removing the child(ren) contains language stating that the removal is in the child(ren)’s best interest or that the child(ren) remaining in the home is contrary to the welfare of the child(ren). This involves removing the child(ren) after a hearing on custody or, if nonsecure custody grounds exist, obtaining an ex-parte nonsecure custody order. N.C.G.S. § 7B-904 gives the court the authority to order the parents to attend and participate in parental responsibility classes, to provide transportation to the juvenile(s) to keep appointments for treatments, and to take appropriate steps to remedy conditions in the home that led to the juvenile's adjudication. The statute specifically sets the procedure governing the contempt proceedings. Failure to comply with the order of the court may lead to the parent(s) being found in civil or criminal contempt. VII. STEP-BY-STEP LEGAL PROCESS (NOT INCLUDING TPR) The information that follows in this section is a general step-by-step examination of the most typical juvenile court actions that county child welfare workers encounter. Because Termination of Parental Rights (TPR) is such a complex issue, that process will receive a closer examination in a separate section within this chapter. While every effort has been made to accurately reflect the overall juvenile court process, the process each agency experiences may vary from district to district and possibly among cases within the same district. Frequently, local rules play a definitive role in determining how cases are handled within the court district. The impact of these local rules may cause similar cases to appear very dissimilar from district to district. County agencies are strongly encouraged to learn more about the local court rules that may be applicable for their district. The local rules for each county can be found on the Administrative Office of the Courts website: http://www.nccourts.org/courts/crs/policies/localrules/default.asp.

Additionally, circumstances within each case may cause cases that appear to be similar in nature to take differing paths from one another. Developing a thorough understanding of the overall process enables the worker to remain flexible (and more successful) when cases do take alternate paths from those expected. A. FILING OF A JUVENILE PETITION ALLEGING ABUSE, NEGLECT, OR DEPENDENCY AND JUVENILE SUMMONS For the purposes of this section, any references to a petition are in relation to the Juvenile Petition (Abuse / Neglect / Dependency) and not the Petition of Obstruction of or Interference with Juvenile Investigation. For more detailed information on this type of a petition, refer to Refusal to Cooperate with / Obstruction of a CPS Assessment. When information supports a determination that a petition is needed for the protection of the child(ren) alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent, the petition shall be drawn by the director or his designee, verified before an official authorized to administer oaths, and filed by the clerk, recording the date of filing. When preparing the Juvenile Petition alleging abuse, neglect, and/or dependency, N.C.G.S. § 7B-402 states, “The petition shall contain the name, date of birth, address of the juvenile, the name and last known address of the juvenile’s parent, guardian, or custodian, and allegations of facts sufficient to invoke jurisdiction over the juvenile.” Using the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) Juvenile Petition (AOC-J-130) ensures all the information required is captured. County child welfare agencies are strongly encouraged to record the allegations of fact regarding the caretaker’s neglectful and/or abusive behavior along with allegations of fact of the harm this neglectful and/or abusive behavior has caused to the children. Both should be stated in a plain, concise, and objective manner. Petitions should also state the severity of harm and explain how the behavior of the caretaker has resulted in the children’s condition. The petition should also state the ability and willingness of the caretaker to adequately care for the child and, if appropriate, any services the parents have been offered but have refused. Petitions should also specifically state the efforts the agency made with the family to prevent the

need for removal of the child(ren). Finally, the petition should state clearly that the children are in need of the court’s protection by citing any relevant statutes. Any petition initiated by the agency shall clearly state all of the conditions that would invoke the court’s jurisdiction. The allegations shall also contain enough information to make a legally valid case. These allegations should be broad enough to allow introduction of all evidence that the agency considers important to the case. Allegations should only include what the agency believes to be facts in the case, not observations or opinions held by others. Workers should be aware that while only those allegations that rise to level of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency are to be included on the petition, some allegations might fit in more than one category. Workers should, in consultation with their agency’s legal counsel, thoughtfully examine the benefits and the drawbacks to citing all known information in cases where allegations may fit within multiple adjudicatory categories. Juvenile Petitions should also include information relative to the agency’s knowledge about issues specified under N.C.G.S. § 7B-506(h) including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Paternity or information on absent / missing parent(s), • Known relatives able and willing to provide care for the child(ren), • ICWA related issues, • MEPA related issues, • Siblings or other juveniles remaining in the home and any specific findings of the assessment of the juveniles or any actions taken to secure the protection of the juveniles. Along with Juvenile Petitions, a Juvenile Summons must also be filed (AOC-J-142). N.C.G.S. § 7B-406 reads, “Immediately after a petition has been filed alleging that a juvenile is abused, neglected, or dependent, the clerk shall issue a summons to the parent, guardian, custodian, or caretaker requiring them to appear for a hearing at the time and place stated in the summons.” In addition, the juvenile summons also contains the following information: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A parent’s rights to legal representation, • In many districts, information relative to the date, time, and location of a prehearing conference or child planning conference,

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If the agency has assumed custody of the child or children when filing a petition, information related to the hearing on need for continued nonsecure custody (7-day hearing), • Information that the dispositional order (or any subsequent order) may require certain activities of either the parent or the juvenile or may even remove the juvenile from the parent’s custody, • Information related to the local law enforcement officer’s ability or inability to serve the summons, petition, affidavit as to the status of a minor child, and order for nonsecure custody (if applicable) on the persons identified within the summons, • A notice to parents, guardians, or caretakers that they may be held in contempt of court if they fail to show, without reasonable cause, at the hearing specified, and • An additional notice that with the service of the summons on the parents, guardians, or caretaker the court system has obtained jurisdiction over them and that their failure to comply with any court order may result in the court issuing a show cause order for contempt. B. REQUESTING AN ORDER FOR NONSECURE CUSTODY In cases in which custody of the child(ren) has to be removed from the caretaker due to the immediate safety needs of the child(ren), the agency is authorized to file an order for nonsecure custody under N.C.G.S. § 7B-502 which reads, “In the case of any juvenile alleged to be within the jurisdiction of the court, the court may order that the juvenile be placed in nonsecure custody pursuant to criteria set out in N.C.G.S.7B-503 when custody of the juvenile is necessary.” Per N.C.G.S. § 7B-503 the court has the authority to issue nonsecure custody orders. The criteria for issuing nonsecure custody orders shall be met only when there is a reasonable factual basis to believe that the matters alleged in the petition are true and that: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The juvenile has been abandoned, or • The juvenile has suffered physical injury or sexual abuse, or • The juvenile is exposed to a substantial risk of injury or sexual abuse due to the actions or inaction of the parent, guardian, or custodian, or

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The juvenile needs medical treatment to cure, alleviate, or prevent suffering serious physical harm which may result in death, disfigurement, or substantial impairment of bodily functions and the parent, guardian, or custodian is either unable or unwilling to provide or consent to treatment, or • The parent consents to continuation of the nonsecure custody order, or • The juvenile is a runaway and consents to nonsecure custody, and • That there is a factual basis to believe that no other reasonable means are available to protect the juvenile. N.C.G.S. § 7B-504 explains that the Order for Nonsecure Custody shall be in writing (AOC-J-150) and directs a local law enforcement officer the authority to assume custody of the juvenile and to give a copy of the custody order to the juvenile’s caretaker. N.C.G.S. § 7B-505 designates the place of nonsecure custody. This statute provides specific guidance on the location a juvenile may be placed, to which workers shall adhere. Prior to placement with a relative outside North Carolina, the placement must be in accordance with the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children. For more information see the Interstate Compact Placement of Children section of the NC Child Welfare manual. N.C.G.S. § 7B-505(b) states that the department of social services shall use due diligence to identify and notify adult relatives and other persons with legal custody of a sibling of the juvenile within 30 days after the initial order removing custody. Adoptive parents of siblings are not considered relatives of the legal child; however, they must be considered in the identification and notification of individuals who have legal custody of a sibling. The department shall file with the court information regarding attempts made to identify and notify adult relatives of the juvenile and persons with legal custody of a sibling of the juvenile. C.PARENTS’ APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL / APPOINTMENT OF RULE 17 GUARDIAN AD LITEM In cases where the Juvenile Petition alleges that a juvenile is abused, neglected, and/or dependent, the parent has the right to counsel, and to appointed counsel in cases of indigence, unless the parent waives that right.

In addition to the right to appointed counsel set forth above, a Guardian ad Litem shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of N.C.G.S. § 1A-1, Rule 17, to represent a parent in the following cases: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Where issues related to a parent’s diminished capacity are present, the court or any party may make a motion for the court to appoint a Rule 17 GAL to assist defense counsel with protection of due process, or • Where the parent is under the age of 18 years. D. APPOINTMENT OF THE GUARDIAN AD LITEM (GAL) The judge may appoint a guardian to the juvenile(s) when no parent appears in a hearing with the juvenile(s) or the judge finds it would be in the best interest of the juvenile(s). A juvenile alleged to be within the jurisdiction of the court has the right to be represented by counsel in all proceedings. If the GAL is not an attorney, the judge shall also appoint an attorney in order to assure protection of the child(ren)’s legal rights through the dispositional phase of the proceedings, and after disposition when necessary to further the best interests of the child(ren). The GAL and the Attorney Advocate have standing to represent the juvenile(s) in all juvenile court actions where they have been appointed. N.C.G.S. § 7B-601 mandates that once a Juvenile Petition is filed alleging abuse or neglect, a Guardian ad Litem is appointed to represent the juvenile before the court. In a dependency matter, the judge may appoint a Guardian ad Litem but is not required to do so. The mission statement of the North Carolina Guardian ad Litem program most appropriately summarizes the role of a GAL volunteer: Our mission is to provide trained independent advocates to represent and promote the best interest of abused and/or neglected children in the state court system, working toward a plan that ensures these children are in a safe and permanent home. The individuals that comprise a local Guardian ad Litem office may vary but may include a District Administrator, a Program Supervisor, an Attorney Advocate (a contracted or staff attorney from the local bar association that represents the juvenile in court) and the GAL volunteer. Some GAL

Programs may also have local office staff (usually called a Program Assistant). Volunteers are individuals from the community who receive thirty or more hours of intensive training, are sworn in before the court, and who represent the best interest of the child. The GAL volunteer also receives supervision from the GAL administrative staff and consults with GAL attorney advocates on legal matters. See the North Carolina Court System web site: Guardian ad Litem – A Child’s Advocate in Court for resources and other reference material. Per N.C.G.S. § 7B-601 the duties of the Guardian ad Litem Program: “shall be to make an investigation to determine the facts, the needs of the juvenile, and the available resources within the family and community to meet those needs; to facilitate, when appropriate, the settlement of disputed issues; to offer evidence and examine witnesses at adjudication; to explore options with the court at the dispositional hearing; to conduct follow-up investigations to insure that the orders of the court are being properly executed; to report to the court when the needs of the juvenile are not being met; and to protect and promote the best interests of the juvenile until formally relieved of the responsibility by the court.” The Guardian ad Litem Program and the county child welfare agency often share common goals, while sometimes representing differing perspectives. The GAL focuses on the best interests of the child and reports to the court the wishes or preferences of the child(ren). Both the GAL and the county child welfare agency focus on the safety, permanence, and well-being of the child(ren) and the need to achieve these goals in a timely manner. The county child welfare agency has the additional focus on strengthening of the family both during the court process and beyond. Prior to each hearing, it is in the best interest of all parties for the county child welfare agency and the GAL Program to collaborate by communicating with each other their perspective on the case, what their intentions are regarding presentation of evidence, and recommendations they intend to make in court. Collaboration between the GAL program and the county child welfare agency is essential. This collaboration assures that, when possible, disputed issues are resolved prior to court

hearings, thus better meeting the needs of the child and the family by moving the case more quickly toward resolution. The GAL volunteer has the statutory authority under N.C.G.S. § 7B-601(c) to obtain any information or reports, whether confidential or not, that may, in the GAL Program’s opinion be relevant to the case. The exception to this is in regard to federally protected information such as substance abuse diagnosis and treatment records. For additional information, refer to the section entitled “Obtaining Substance Abuse Records by Court Order” within this chapter. The GAL volunteer should present his or her Order of Appointment to access the information, and the county child welfare worker should place a copy of the order in the child’s record. The GAL and the agency shall share any information that is not otherwise federally protected and that will assist each in understanding the full issues of the case so that the child(ren) and family receive maximum benefit from the two services (for additional information on re-disclosure and confidentiality of records please refer to Confidentiality . E. DAY ONE CONFERENCES OR CHILD PLANNING CONFERENCES Day One Conferences or Child Planning Conferences (CPC) can be an invaluable strategy to all parties involved, especially the family. While not conducted statewide, these conferences are usually instituted in either Family Court or in Court Improvement Project (CIP) districts, are facilitated by court staff, and may be the first opportunity in which the parents are given to be present. Conferences are held either the day following (in the case of Day One Conferences) or within a few days (in the case of Child Planning Conferences) of the agency filing a juvenile petition alleging abuse, neglect, and/or dependency. The purpose of these conferences is to get the court case moving quickly and to assist the agency with court related issues of the case. To move the court process forward, the Case Coordinator informs parties present of their rights, ensures there is counsel for parents and a Guardian ad Litem volunteer appointed for the child, ensures that the Juvenile Petition and Juvenile Summons is served and sets the next hearing date. To assist the agency with the case, the Case Coordinator makes inquiries concerning the circumstances of the case, looks at issues such as the child(ren)’s current placement, early parental

visitation, availability of placement with relatives, extended family or family friends, and immediate service needs of the family. F. MEDIATION “An increasing number of juvenile courts across the country are using mediation and other non-adversarial dispute resolution methods, such as family group conferencing, to settle child maltreatment and TPR cases. The mediation process usually is called ‘dependency mediation’ and is similar in many ways to settlement conferences, except that there is a skilled and trained mediator facilitating the discussion.” As with Child Planning Conferences, not all 100 counties will operate in court districts where mediation is used. Like CFT meetings, these meetings are facilitated and involve the family and their supports (which, in this situation may include their attorney, the Attorney Advocate for the GAL and the agency’s attorney). The North Carolina General Assembly enacted legislation in 2006 to provide for mediation services in juvenile court to resolve issues in cases in which a juvenile is alleged or has been adjudicated to be abused, neglected, and/or dependent, or in which a petition or motion to terminate a parent’s rights has been filed. This service is not currently available in all counties, but the legislation calls for the Administrative Office of the Courts to establish permanency mediation in phases in all judicial districts in the state. Mediation is a valuable tool for judges in juvenile court. Mediation is a process whereby a neutral third party--a mediator--acts to encourage and facilitate the resolution of a dispute between parties. It is informal and non- adversarial processes with the objective of helping the disputing parties reach a mutually acceptable and voluntary agreement. The mediator is not a judge, lawyer, or counselor, rather the mediator is a trained, skilled facilitator who assists in defining and clarifying issues, helps reduce obstacles to communication, and provides the opportunity for exploring possible solutions to reaching agreement. Local court rules in each judicial district determine the specific process that the judge will use to order the parties to participate in permanency mediation. The parties in permanency mediation consist of, at a minimum, each parent, the parent(s) attorney, county child welfare worker assigned to the case, county child welfare supervisor, agency attorney, attorney advocate, and GAL staff

and/or volunteer. North Carolina uses a co-mediation model (two mediators) which takes into account the large number and diversity of people present, the complexity of the work, and the demands of negotiating a petition and producing agreements to be written and signed off on in the session. Mediation provides the opportunity for increased parental involvement in the development of a case plan tailored to the family’s specific needs, as well as an opportunity for the agency to clearly articulate its expectations early in the case. By assisting to move a case to permanency more quickly, permanency mediation provides cost savings to both the foster care and court systems. Perhaps more importantly, moving to permanency provides emotional and physical stability for the child(ren). A thorough explanation is provided by N.C.G.S. § 7B-202 which explains: (a) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall establish a Permanency Mediation Program to provide statewide and uniform services to resolve issues in cases under this Subchapter in which a juvenile is alleged or has been adjudicated to be abused, neglected, or dependent, or in which a petition or motion to terminate a parent's rights has been filed. Participants in the mediation shall include the parties and their attorneys, including the guardian ad litem and attorney advocate for the child, provided, the court may allow mediation to proceed without the participation of a parent whose identity is unknown, a party who was served and has not made an appearance, or a parent, guardian, or custodian who has not been served despite a diligent attempt to serve the person. Upon a finding of good cause, the court may allow mediation to proceed without the participation of a parent who is unable to participate due to incarceration, illness, or some other cause. Others may participate by agreement of the parties, their attorneys, and the mediator, or by order of the court. (b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall establish in phases a statewide Permanency Mediation Program consisting of local district programs to be established in all judicial districts of the State. The Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts is authorized to approve contractual agreements for such services as executed by order of the Chief District Court Judge of a district court district, such contracts to be exempt from competitive bidding procedures under

The Order on Nonsecure Custody shall be in writing with appropriate Findings of Fact and signed and entered within 30 days of the completion of the hearing. Findings of Fact include the evidence that was relied upon to reach the decision, goals, and purposes that continued custody are to achieve. The order shall detail the reasonable efforts made by the agency to avoid or eliminate need for placement and whether such efforts should continue. As per N.C.G.S. § 7B-506 a second hearing on continued nonsecure custody shall be held within seven business days after the first hearing is held. Hearings thereafter shall be held at intervals of no more than 30 calendar days. All of these subsequent hearings may be waived only with the consent of the juvenile’s parents and the juvenile’s Guardian ad Litem. Additionally, the statute specifies that at every hearing to determine the need for continued nonsecure custody, the court shall: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Inquire about the identity and location of missing parents and agency attempts to locate and serve them, • Inquire about whether a relative is willing and able to provide proper care and supervision in a safe home and, if so, order placement with that relative. • Inquire whether other juveniles remain in the home from which juvenile was removed and, if there are, inquire as to the specific findings of the investigation conducted and any actions taken or services provided by the agency for protection of the other juveniles, and • Consider issues related to both MEPA and ICWA. H. The adjudicatory hearing shall be a judicial process designed to adjudicate the existence or nonexistence of any of the conditions alleged in a petition. N.C.G.S. § 7B-802 explains, “The adjudicatory hearing shall be a judicial process designed to adjudicate the existence or nonexistence of any of the conditions alleged in the petition.” Adjudication means making a judgment (i.e., legally deciding whether something did or did not occur) based on either the evidence presented or either party agreeing (stipulating) to the existence or non-existence of the conditions of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency. In the adjudicatory hearing, the court shall protect the rights of the juvenile and the juvenile's parent to assure due process of law (N.C.G.S. § 7B-802). The adjudicatory hearing must be held within 60 days of the filing of the petition unless the judge orders that it be held later (N.C.G.S. § 7B-801). The allegations stated in the petition must be proven by clear and convincing evidence (N.C.G.S. § 7B-807). The judge may continue the hearing, for good cause, for as long as is reasonably required to receive additional evidence, reports, or assessments requested by the Court or other information needed in the best interest of the juvenile. The rules of evidence in civil cases apply in these proceedings. All adjudicatory and dispositional hearings shall be recorded. If the judge finds that the allegations in the petition have been proven, he or she shall so state. If the judge finds that the allegations have not been proven, he or she shall dismiss the petition with prejudice and the juvenile will be released from nonsecure custody. The Order on Adjudication shall be reduced to writing, signed, and entered no later than 30 days following the completion of the hearing. If the order is not entered within 30 days following completion of the hearing, the clerk of court for juvenile matters shall schedule a subsequent hearing at the first session of court scheduled for the hearing of juvenile matters following the 30-day period to determine and explain the reason for the delay and to obtain any needed clarification as to the contents of the order. The order shall be entered within ten days of the subsequent hearing required by this subsection. I. DISPOSITIONAL HEARING

It is strongly recommended that a motion for review be filed with the court in all cases in which it is proposed that a child be returned, even on a trial basis, to a parent residing in another state. Parents have a legal right to ask the court for the return of their child even if the agency does not consider the situation appropriate. The agency may recommend against the return of the child(ren) at the time of the court hearing. The court maintains the right to return the child(ren) against agency recommendations if it so determines. If a child was accepted for placement because of a court order, the court must be kept informed of the child’s progress. 2. Adoption Adoption is the permanent plan offering the most stability to the child who cannot return to his or her parents. Factors to consider include whether the child(ren) is likely to return home and whether the child(ren) can be freed for adoption. In order for the child to be adopted, both parents must voluntarily relinquish their parental rights or their parental rights must be terminated by the court. The agency shall file a petition for termination of parental rights within 60 calendar days of the agency’s decision that the permanent plan is adoption or within 60 calendar days of the hearing that determines that the plan is adoption unless the court makes other findings. There must be legal grounds to terminate each parent’s rights. If an American Indian parent or custodian relinquishes his or her rights or consents to the plan of adoption, the consent is not valid unless procedures of the Indian Child Welfare Act are followed. Care should be taken in assessing this option to consider whether there may be conflict or divided loyalties between the parent of the child(ren) and the adopting relatives and how these issues would be handled. If an adoption by relative or fictive kin can be achieved, the child(ren)’s sense of identity and family history can be preserved. Adoption by foster parents is often an appropriate plan, especially if the child(ren) has developed a close relationship with the foster family. Such a plan has the benefit of providing continuity for the child with a family that he or she already knows without requiring an additional move. When adoption by a relative, fictive kin, or foster parent is not an option, the county child welfare agency should place the child in an approved adoptive home. There may be approved families waiting that may be appropriate for the child(ren), or potential adoptive families may need to be recruited specifically for the child(ren). Recruitment activities should include the use of media resources. The county child welfare agencies shall have current information available for prospective adoptive families that describes the kind of children needing placement, the availability of Adoption Assistance, and procedures for referring families they are unable to serve to other child placing agencies.

Reinstatement of Parental Rights

Juvenile Court

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
Reinstatement of Parental Rights (RPR) became a permanency option when N.C.G.S. § 7B-1114 went into effect. Circumstances that would allow this permanent option are very narrow. Only the youth, the county child welfare agency, or the youth’s guardian ad litem attorney advocate may file a motion to reinstate parental rights. Three conditions must be met in order to consider filing a motion for RPR: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The youth is at least 12 years of age or if under the age of 12, extraordinary circumstances exist that warrant consideration of reinstatement of parental rights, 2. The youth does not have a legal parent, is not in an adoptive placement, and is not likely to be adopted within a reasonable time period, and 3. The order terminating parental rights was entered at least three years prior unless the youth’s plan is no longer adoption. When the county child welfare agency with custody of the youth is considering RPR, it is important to hear from the youth and explore his or her thoughts, concerns, needs, etc. Care should be taken to ensure that the former parent is interested and appropriate, as well as, what the impact might be for the youth. A youth may be afraid to freely speak in front of a parent for fear of being disloyal or hurtful, therefore, the youth should be given an opportunity to express himself or herself without the former parent present prior to any Child and Family Team (CFT) Meeting. A CFT is required to make a change in the permanent plan. Flexibility in who should attend the CFT to discuss RPR is also required. The youth should be able to invite any supports or connections that are important to him or her to the CFT. The CFT should assist the youth in making an informed decision and provide him or her with an understanding of any possible repercussions. If a youth does not currently have a guardian ad litem, one should be requested and will be required if a motion to reinstate parental rights is filed. Finally, it is important

to clarify that the court will have the ultimate decision-making authority regarding implementing this as the youth’s permanent plan and it would be considered as the concurrent plan until court ordered. Questions for the youth and the team to consider when RPR is an option: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What efforts have been made to achieve adoption or find a permanent guardian? Has the county child welfare agency actively worked toward other permanent plan options? • Has the former parent remedied the conditions that led to the youth’s removal and placement in foster care and subsequent termination of parental rights? What specifically has changed? What evidence is there that the change will continue? Would the changed circumstance continue even if the former parent were to lose an existing support system? • Will the youth receive appropriate care and supervision with the former parent? • How mature is the youth and is the youth able to express his or her preference? Is there any reason to believe that the youth is receiving pressure from the former parent to choose this plan? • Is the former parent willing to resume contact with the youth and have rights reinstated? • Is the youth willing to resume contact with the former parent and have rights reinstated?

What LINKS services would still be available to the youth? Would the former parent and the youth be open to those services, if in the youth’s best interests? What benefits might the youth have been counting on for his or her education? See North Carolina Foster Care to Success and North Carolina Reach for details on these scholarship programs. Will the youth have health insurance? • Would the youth be able to maintain current meaningful connections, including those with siblings? Does the youth have an ongoing relationship with any sibling? How is the connection supported? If the sibling was adopted, will the adoptive parent(s) be open to continuing the relationship that might include the adoptive child’s former parent? If transportation is key to continuing the relationship, is it accessible? Will the sibling want to continue the relationship if it includes the former parent? Will there be new family dynamics to work through for the connection to continue? What are the other meaningful connections that the youth has and how will they be impacted? If a former parent whose rights have been terminated contact the county child welfare agency or contacts the youth’s guardian ad litem regarding RPR, then the youth must be informed of his or her right to file a motion for RPR. When a motion for RPR is filed and the court determines it to be the permanent plan for the youth, the county child welfare agency will continue to have the responsibility for the youth’s placement

While emancipation is not a permanent placement option, and while very few youth pursue this (fewer still achieve), the process of emancipation is an issue that county child welfare agencies may, at some point, be required to address. Emancipation occurs in a very few cases, whether through marriage, joining the armed forces, or emancipation by the court. Some youth will leave the custody of the county child welfare agency without ever achieving a permanent family. It is the responsibility of the county child welfare agency to prepare these children for self-sufficiency. It is also the responsibility of the county child welfare agency to assist the youth in forming a positive attachment to adults who can be a resource to that youth through the rest of his or her childhood and into adulthood. Efforts to achieve a permanent plan for the youth should always remain active. If the director of the county child welfare agency is asked to consent to marriage of a child in the legal custody of the agency, or to give permission for that child to join the armed services, exceptionally careful consideration shall be given to ensure that the child’s safety and needs will be provided. TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS (TPR)

Juvenile Court

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
Termination of Parental Rights is the legal severing of all rights and obligations of the parent to the child and of the child to the parent (except the child's right to inheritance from the parent which continues until a final decree of adoption has been issued). This type of court action comes under the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Division of the District Court. The North Carolina General Statutes governing the legal framework for Termination of Parental Rights can be found in the following statutes: N.C.G.S. § 7B-1100, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1101, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1101.1, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1102, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1103, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1104, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1105, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1106, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1106.1, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1107, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1108, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1109, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1110, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1111, N.C.G.S. § 7B-1112. As with any other juvenile court action, this particular action is initiated by the filing of a motion or petition for Termination of Parental Rights of the parent or parents whose consents have not been obtained. The Notice of Motion Seeking Termination of Parental Rights (AOC-J-210) may be used when a TPR action is filed by motion. If a TPR is filed by petition, then the Summons in Proceeding for Termination of Parental Rights (AOC-J-208) must be used. As with other petitions for Juvenile Court action, termination petitions are filed with the Clerk of Court. Due to the complex legal nature of termination proceedings, county child welfare agencies seeking to have parental rights terminated should coordinate all aspects of this court action in close consultation with their legal counsel. A. GROUND S FOR TPR N.C.G.S. § 7B-1111 provides that the first requirement for terminating the parental rights is a finding by clear, cogent and convincing evidence that one or more of the following conditions exist:

Juvenile Court

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
1. The court has found that the parent has abused or neglected the child in accordance with the definitions of N.C.G.S § 7B-101, 2. The parent has willfully left a child in foster care for more than 12 months without showing to the satisfaction of the court that “reasonable progress under the circumstances has been made within 12 months in correcting those conditions that led to the removal of the child,” 3. The child has been placed in the custody of a county child welfare agency, a licensed child placing facility, a child caring institution, or a foster home, and the parent, for a continuous period of six months immediately prior to filing of TPR petition, has willfully failed to pay a reasonable portion of the cost of care for the child although physically and financially able to do so, 4. One parent has been awarded custody of the child by judicial decree, or has custody by agreement of the parents, and the other parent whose parental rights are sought to be terminated has for a period of one year or more preceding the filing of the petition willfully failed without justification to pay for the care, support and education of the child, as required by said decree or custody agreement, 5. The father of a child born out of wedlock has not prior to filing of petition to terminate his parental rights: (a) established paternity, (b) legitimated the child, (c) married the mother of the child or (d) provided substantial financial support or consistent care with respect to the child and mother, (e) established paternity through G.S. 49-14, 110-132, 130A-101, 130A-118, or other judicial proceeding,

6. The parent is incapable of providing for the proper care and supervision of the child, such that the child is a dependent child, and there is a reasonable probability that such incapability will continue for the near future. Incapability under this subdivision may be the result of substance abuse, intellectual/developmental disability, mental illness, organic brain syndrome, or any other similar cause or condition, 7. The parent has willfully abandoned the child for at least six consecutive months immediately preceding the filing of the petition. For the purposes of this section, a child may be willfully abandoned by his or her natural father if the mother of the child had been abandoned by and was living separate and apart from the father at the time of the child’s birth, although the father may not have known of such birth, but in any event the child must be over the age of three months at the time of the filing of the petition, 8. The parent has committed murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent or other child residing in the home, aided, abetted, attempted, conspired or solicited murder or voluntary manslaughter of the child, another child of the parent or other child residing in the home, or has committed a felony assault that results in serious bodily injury to the child, another child of the parent or other child residing in the home, 9. The parental rights of the parent with respect to another child of the parent have been terminated involuntarily by a court of competent jurisdiction and the parent lacks the ability or willingness to establish a safe home. 10. Where the juvenile has been relinquished to a county department of social services or a licensed child-placing agency for the purpose of adoption or placed with a prospective adoptive parent for adoption; the consent or relinquishment to adoption by the parent has become irrevocable except upon a showing of fraud, duress, or other circumstance as set forth in G.S. 48-3-609 or G.S. 48-3-707; termination of parental rights is a condition precedent to

11. The parent has been convicted of a sexually related offense under Chapter 14 of the General Statutes that resulted in the conception of the juvenile. (B) The burden in these proceedings is on the petitioner or movant to prove the facts justifying the termination by clear and convincing evidence.

TPR is a two-part process. First, the agency must show by clear, cogent, and convincing evidence the existence of one or more grounds for TPR. Second, even if these grounds exist, the decision to terminate the parent’s rights must be determined by the court to be in the child’s best interest. Prior to the filing of a TPR petition, agencies shall thoughtfully consider the following questions. The answers to these questions should be thoroughly discussed with the agency’s legal counsel in consideration of preparing evidence for the court: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Have all appropriate services been offered to the parents in a timely manner? • Have the parents responded to these services in a way that demonstrates they are now able to provide a minimally sufficient level of care for their children? • If the child has special needs, are the parents able, at the time of the TPR hearing, to meet those needs? • Is there a reason to believe that the parents could materially improve the conditions or behavior that led to the removal of their child in the next three months if given the opportunity? Can any improvement be expected to last? • What type of relationship have the parents maintained with their child since he or she was removed?

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What progress or problems has the child experienced while receiving Child Placement Services? The county child welfare agency must also present evidence that addresses “best interest” issues for the court. Are there members of the kinship network who are willing and able to adopt the child? Is there an existing emotional attachment between the adult and child? Can the child maintain contact with them if they do not adopt the child? Will they be supportive of an adoptive placement? Will siblings remain together? Should siblings remain together? • What is the potential for adoption by non-relatives? Will the foster parents adopt this child? Are there other adoptive parents waiting? Will the agency conduct a child specific recruitment effort? • Is there a balance between what the child wants against what the child needs? Does the child understand the issues? What has the child said about his or her preferences? Who has talked to the child? Are there conflicting loyalty issues? • How long has the child been waiting for a permanent home?

NCGS § 7B-1001 sets forth the provisions for an appeal of an adjudication or order of disposition by any person who has been a party to a termination of parental rights proceeding. The appeal is made to the North Carolina Court of Appeals. 6. Effects of TPR Order A termination order has the effect of completely and permanently severing all parent/child rights and obligations between the parent and the child, except that the child’s right to inherit from his or her parents will not be terminated until a Final Decree of Adoption has been issued. If the child is in the custody of a county child welfare agency or a licensed private child placing agency at the time the termination is filed, upon entry of the termination order that agency shall have all placement rights to the child, including the right to consent to the adoption. The agency’s consent in such cases should be executed in writing. It is possible for the agency to be vested with consenting authority in some situations in which it was not the petitioner for termination of parental rights, such as if foster parents or a GAL petition for termination regarding a child in agency custody. In the case of foster parent petitioners, it is anticipated that usually the agency will feel that adoption by such long-term caretakers is in the child’s best interests and will agree for the foster parents to adopt. In cases in which the child had not been in agency custody or relinquished by one parent to an agency for adoptive placement and the petition for termination was filed by someone other than an agency director or representative, the court, upon terminating parental rights, may place custody of the child with the petitioner, or some other suitable person, or with an agency, according to the child’s needs and interests. 7. Post-Termination Reviews

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
Per N.C.G.S. § 7B-909, reviews are required following termination of parental rights in order to ensure that every reasonable effort is being made to finalize a permanent plan for the child who has been placed in the custody of a county agency or licensed child-placing agency. Placement reviews shall be held no later than six months from the date of the termination of parental rights. Subsequent reviews shall be held every six months until the juvenile is placed for adoption and a final decree of adoption is entered. Additionally, the appointment of the GAL continues until the decree of adoption is filed. At each review hearing, the court may consider information from the agency, the licensed child-placing agency, the Guardian ad Litem, the child, the foster parent, and any other person or agency the court determines is likely to aid in the review. The court shall consider at least the following in its review: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The adequacy of the plan developed by the county child welfare agency or licensed child-placing agency for a permanent placement, • Whether the child has been listed with the NC Adoption Resource Exchange, the North Carolina Photo Adoption Listing Services (PALS), or any other specialized adoption agency, • The specific recruitment efforts made by the agency to find a permanent home for the child, • Whether the agency’s efforts toward achieving the permanent plan for the child are sufficient or reasonable.

Juvenile Court

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
The court shall affirm the agency’s plans or require additional steps that are necessary to accomplish a permanent plan in the best interest of the child. If the child has been placed for adoption prior to the date scheduled for the review, written notice of placement shall be given to the clerk and placed in the court file. The review hearing shall be cancelled, and the clerk shall give notice of the cancellation to all persons previously notified. The process of selection of specific adoptive parents shall be the responsibility of and within the discretion of the county child welfare agency or licensed child-placing agency. The Guardian ad Litem may request information from and consult with the agency concerning the selection process. The county child welfare agency or the private child-placing agency must notify the GAL in writing of the filing of the adoption petition and the GAL has ten days from the receipt of the written notification to raise any concerns about the adoption selection process. IX. LEGAL MANDATES WHEN USING THE JUVENILE COURT A. CONTRARY TO THE WELFARE The very first court order must contain appropriate language if the child is to be IV-E eligible. For additional information on IV-E eligibility refer to Appendix 3.5 in the NC Child Welfare manual. juvenile meets this requirement. This must be in the initial removal order which must be the Order on Nonsecure Custody if the child is removed immediately by a nonsecure order. In addition, the court order must state that the county child welfare agency has placement and care responsibility. The removal order must result in the immediate departure of the child from the home unless the court order specifies an alternative timeframe that assures the safety of the child. In instances when a child is removed as a result of a hearing on the merits of the petition, rather than a nonsecure order, or pursuant to undisciplined or delinquent actions, or in a motion for review when the county child welfare agency has custody but not placement authority, then the court order that results in placement must contain these findings because that would be the initial removal order. If this language is not in the very first court order, even if the findings are made later and included in a subsequent order, IV-E eligibility cannot be established for this removal period. B. REASONABLE EFFORTS Within 60 days of the removal of the child from the home, there must be a judicial determination that the efforts made by the county child welfare agency to prevent the removal of the child were reasonable or sufficient. The court may also meet this requirement by finding that under the circumstances (such as imminent danger to the child), making no efforts was reasonable. The court may also find that no efforts were required if certain specific situations exist (N.C.G.S. § 7B-507). In cases where the county child welfare agency is unable to locate the child, details of diligent efforts should be provided to the court. While the federal regulations allow a finding of reasonable efforts within 60 days, N.C.G.S. § 7B-506(a) requires a finding of reasonable efforts at the nonsecure custody hearing (as well as all subsequent nonsecure, dispositional, and review hearings), thus a judicial determination regarding reasonable efforts must be obtained at the earliest opportunity.

Juvenile Court

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
If reasonable efforts language is not in the findings of the court order within 60 days of the child’s entry into care, the child will not be IV-E eligible throughout the entire removal period. In some instances, children with whom the county child welfare agency has not had previous contact are placed in the legal custody of the agency. A court order issued at the request of the county child welfare agency within 60 days of the removal must contain findings that address efforts around that removal and what efforts the agency is making to work toward reunification of the child and family. The child becomes eligible from the first day of the month in which the actual order is made that details reasonable efforts, if all other requirements have been met. X. JUVENILE COURT DOCUMENTATION The county child welfare worker’s thorough preparation for court is a factor critical to effective and timely juvenile court decisions. The court report and the county child welfare worker’s testimony must each accurately reflect the county child welfare agency’s knowledge of the child and family. The contents of court reports may differ according to the requirements of the juvenile court district. However, the purpose of the report is consistent-- to document the agency’s findings, determinations of risk of further harm, plan goals and activities intended to correct the conditions that led to the request for custody and/or removal, and recommendations to the court for judicial action. It is strongly recommended that court reports be shared with all parties involved in any court action (including the parent’s attorney, the Guardian ad Litem and the Attorney Advocate, etc.) before the day of court. A. For the parents, this may be an inability or unwillingness to change. For the county child welfare agency or community, there may be a lack of appropriate resources to help the family or the agency may not have had sufficient time to provide all needed services. The report should also clearly reflect the status of concurrent plans that are being developed or may be explored and recommended changes to the primary permanent plan goal, when appropriate. CONTINUANCES North Carolina Supreme Court Rules require that each judicial district adopt policies on limiting continuances. Rule 4 of the State of North Carolina District Court Model Continuance Policy (1997) states the following regarding juvenile abuse and neglect cases: The goal of a case management plan for juvenile court is to put the courts in the best position to ensure the safety of children, and give them the best possible chance of living in stable, permanent families. Therefore, continuances should be allowed only when it serves the child’s best interest. Participants must come to court prepared to meet each statutory obligation that is required for resolution of these matters. Accordingly, juvenile cases, including motions for review in neglect and abuse matters, should be disposed at the earliest opportunity, including the first setting for hearing. In resolving court conflicts, juvenile cases shall take precedence over all other matters. Continuances should not be allowed for the convenience of attorneys or parties. Continuances should be granted in extraordinary circumstances such as the illness of an attorney, inability to locate witnesses, or service of process has not yet been completed. When cases are calendared, parties should be prepared for, and expect, a meaningful event to occur. When cases are continued as a matter of practice, usually upon request and agreement of both parties and their counsel, valuable court time is lost, and time is lost towards achieving permanence for children.

N.C.G.S. § 7B-803 states: “The court may, for good cause, continue the hearing for as long as is reasonably required to receive additional evidence, reports, or assessments that the court has requested, or other information needed in the best interests of the juvenile and to allow for a reasonable time for the parties to conduct expeditious discovery. Otherwise, continuances shall be granted only in extraordinary circumstances when necessary for the proper administration of justice or in the best interests of the juvenile.” Often, how the local court districts have complied with Supreme Court’s requirement of the adoption of policies limiting continuances is to include this information in the court district’s local rules. It should be noted that for IV-E eligibility requirements, continuances are not sufficient to meet the requirement unless the court actually hears evidence related to the agency’s efforts to prevent removal. B. CHANGING VENUE N.C.G.S. § 7B-400 states: “A proceeding in which a juvenile is alleged to be abused, neglected, and/or dependent may be commenced in the district in which the juvenile resides or is present. When a proceeding is commenced in a district other than that of the juvenile's residence, the court, on its own motion or upon motion of any party, may transfer the proceeding to the court in the district where the juvenile resides. A transfer under this section may be made at any time.”

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
Transfers of the physical juvenile court case are made by the Clerks of Court and are not as simple as sending one file from one district to another. In lay terms, a motion (in the sending county) to transfer a case from one district to another is made and notice is provided to the receiving district and the receiving county child welfare agency. A hearing is held on the motion, at which the receiving agency should be permitted to be heard. C. FAMILY COURT Family Court is a group of specially trained judges and staff in a district who seek to quickly respond to family and child concerns. In Family Court, a case coordinator assigns one judge to one family to hear the matters that occur when a family breaks apart, such as divorce, child custody and visitation, property sharing and alimony. In districts without Family Court, each of these family matters is assigned separately to whichever judge is holding court on the date of the hearing, so he or she may not be familiar with all of the family’s issues. Case coordinators also assign a specially trained judge to one family to hear cases of child abuse, neglect, dependency, and juvenile delinquency. Judges and staff work to make sure that these cases are heard in court regularly, based on time standards in the law. One of the goals of family court is to encourage families to reduce conflict and solve problems through mediation outside of court, rather than having the judge conduct a trial. Mediation can be used to settle money matters such as child support, and/or to reach an agreement on child custody and visitation. Another goal of Family Court is to complete hearings on family matters within one year. Family court staff keeps the legal issues moving through the court process by scheduling hearings according to time standards and organizing court calendars so that meaningful events occur at each court session.

FILING A PETITION

This section specifies how to file a petition for adjudication for abuse / neglect / dependency with or without filing for non-secure custody. See CPS Assessment policy for petitioning regarding Refusal to Cooperate with / Obstruction of a CPS Assessment.

When a county child welfare services agency determines that a petition is needed for the protection of a child(ren) alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent, the petition must be drawn by the director or their designee, verified before an official authorized to administer oaths, and filed by the clerk, recording the date of filing. Whether removal of the child(ren) is required, the Juvenile Petition (form AOC-J-130) is filed with either the local clerk of court’s office or, when the clerk’s office is closed, with the local magistrate’s office. Using the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) Juvenile Petition (form AOC-J-130) ensures that all of the information required is captured.

When a child(ren) is placed outside their county of residence as the result of a TPSA or Conflict of Interest (COI), whether during a CPS-A or In-Home Services, this does not change the original venue (resident county) when filing a Juvenile Petition.

Along with Juvenile Petitions, a Juvenile Summons and Notice of Hearing must also be filed (form AOC-J-142). The Juvenile Summons also contains the following information:

- A parent’s rights to legal representation;
- In many districts, information relative to the date, time, and location of a prehearing conference or child planning conference;
- If the agency has assumed custody of the child(ren) when filing a petition, information related to the hearing on need for continued non-secure custody (7-day hearing);
- Information that the dispositional order (or any subsequent order) may require certain activities of either the parent or the juvenile or may even remove the juvenile from the parent’s custody;
- Information related to the local law enforcement officer’s ability or inability to serve the summons, petition, affidavit as to the status of a minor child, and order for non-secure custody (if applicable) on the persons identified within the summons;
- A notice to parents, guardians, or caretakers that they may be held in contempt of court if they fail to show, without reasonable cause, at the hearing specified; and

Filing a Petition

- An additional notice that with the service of the summons on the parents, guardians, or caretaker the court system has obtained jurisdiction over them and that their failure to comply with any court order may result in the court issuing a show cause order for contempt.

Juvenile Petitions should also include information relative to the agency’s knowledge about issues including:

- Paternity or information on absent / missing parent(s);
- Known relatives able and willing to provide care for the child(ren);
- Any person with legal custody of the victim child(ren)’s sibling. Adoptive parents of siblings are not considered relatives of the legal child; however, they must be considered in the identification and notification of individuals who have legal custody of a sibling.
- Child(ren)’s Mexican heritage;
- ICWA related issues;
- MEPA related issues;
- Information regarding the parent’s military affiliation (<http://www.nccourts.org/Forms/Documents/1664.pdf>) Service Members Civil Relief Act Affidavit; and
- Siblings or other juveniles remaining in the home and any specific findings of the assessment of the juveniles or any actions taken to secure the protection of the juveniles.

SAFETY CIRCUMSTANCES REQUIRING NON-SECURE CUSTODY

See Safety for list of circumstances requiring non-secure custody.

Temporary Custody in Extreme Safety Situations

In an extreme safety situation, the county child welfare worker must take temporary physical custody without a court order if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the juvenile is abused, neglected, and/or dependent and that the child(ren) would be injured or could not be taken into custody if it were first necessary to obtain a court order. The county child welfare worker must arrange for the placement, care, supervision, and transportation of the juvenile while in the temporary custody of the county child welfare worker.

Upon notification by the county child welfare worker of the extreme safety situation, the agency director or their designee determines whether to file a petition for non-secure custody. If no petition is filed, the child(ren) must be returned to the parent from whom he or she was removed. When taking a juvenile into temporary custody, the agency must:

- Notify the parent, guardian, or custodian that the juvenile has been taken into custody and advise the caretaker of the right to be present with the juvenile until a determination is made of the need for non-secure custody (county child welfare worker must make every reasonable effort to notify the caretaker; however, failure to notify the

the child(ren) in the home compared to the harm that will be caused by the removal.

County child welfare workers should consider staffing the case with the county child welfare services agency's designated attorney prior to the decision to file a petition.

SAFETY CIRCUMSTANCES REQUIRING NON-SECURE CUSTODY

The initial decision to remove the child(ren) should be based on whether it is safe for the child(ren) to remain in the home. Criteria determining safety should be objective and behaviorally specific and documented. The documentation should include terms that describe specific behaviors and patterns of parental care which have resulted in, or are likely to result in, harm to the child(ren).

Removal of a child(ren) from his home has negative consequences for the child(ren), even when necessary to protect the child(ren)'s safety. Therefore, removal should be approached with great caution. Removal will never be in the child(ren)'s best interest unless the removal is part of an overall plan, not only for safety but also for a timely, appropriate and permanent resolution.

County child welfare agencies are strongly encouraged to record the allegations of fact regarding the caretaker's neglectful and/or abusive behavior along with allegations of fact of the harm this neglectful and/or abusive behavior has caused to the child(ren). Both should be stated in a plain, concise, and objective manner. Petitions should also state the severity of harm and explain how the behavior of the caretaker has resulted in the child(ren)'s condition. The petition should also state the ability and willingness

The court may waive further review hearings or terminate its jurisdiction once the parent, guardian, or custodian successfully completes court-ordered services, and the juvenile is residing in a safe home. Petitions should also specifically state the efforts the agency made with the family to prevent the need for removal of the child(ren). Finally, the petition should state clearly that the child(ren) need the court’s protection by citing any relevant statutes. These petition statements should be broad enough to allow introduction of all evidence that the agency considers important to the case. Statements should only include what the agency believes to be facts in the case, not observations or opinions held by others. County child welfare workers should be aware that while only those allegations that rise to level of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency are to be included on the petition, some allegations might support more than one category. County child welfare workers should, in consultation with their agency’s legal counsel, thoughtfully examine the benefits and the drawbacks to whether to petition for abuse, neglect, and/or dependency.

County child welfare workers need to enlist the cooperation of the parent in helping the child(ren) understand the need for a new living arrangement. If the parent cannot do this, the county child welfare worker must take this role with the child(ren). Even very young child(ren) can understand that a change is being made and that the parent cannot care properly for the them at this time. It is generally helpful if the county child welfare worker can provide pictures of the placement provider when the child(ren) do not know the provider. This can be done on the way to the foster home and can help the child(ren) begin to master the move. Young child(ren) have a different concept of time and they have vivid imaginations. In strange surroundings, they imagine that terrible things have happened to the parent or that they will never see members of the family again. The county child welfare worker is the child(ren)'s link to his family in the first few hours of the move. Through the eyes of the child(ren), it is traumatic to be removed from parents and home. To be separated from siblings adds to the impact of loss and trauma. When siblings can remain together in an out-of-home placement, there can be a greater sense of continuity of family. Frequently, older children will have had some responsibilities for caring for younger siblings when in their own home, and they may feel worried and protective regarding these siblings if separated from

However, prior to disclosure of a child’s HIV status, county child welfare agencies must consider and protect the child’s right to confidentiality. Knowledge of such things can help the child(ren) feel more comfortable. It is important for the placement provider to know what may be expected from the child(ren) behaviorally to respond appropriately to those behaviors. The county child welfare worker should also inform the placement provider of the concurrent permanency planning process for the child(ren) and of possible concurrent plans for achieving permanence for the child(ren). The foster parent should be informed of their role in planning for the child(ren) in partnership with the agency and the birth family. At the time of placement, when the county child welfare services agency provides agency contact information, the placement provider should be reminded to contact the agency when, but not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Any child injury or medical issue; • Any child significant behavioral issue; • Any disclosure by the child regarding incidents of abuse and/or neglect;

- If remaining in that school is not in the child(ren)'s best interest, assure immediate enrollment of the child(ren) in a new school with all educational records provided.

When a county child welfare services agency takes custody of the child(ren), a Best Interest Determination (BID) meeting regarding the child's school placement must occur prior to a change in school. If the BID meeting does not occur prior to the child(ren)'s new placement, a BID meeting must be scheduled within five school days after the child(ren)'s placement.

Placement (or Placement Change) Preparation and Follow-Up

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
The Foster Child Notification of Placement (Change) Form (DSS-5133) must be provided to the child(ren)’s current school. See DSS-5133ins. When an emergency placement requires a school change prior to holding a BID meeting, the Foster Child Immediate Enrollment Form (DSS-5135) must be provided to the new school. See DSS-5135ins.
SHARED PARENTING The county child welfare worker must facilitate an initial shared parenting meeting between the parent(s) and placement provider(s) no later than 14 days after the child(ren)’s placement out of the home.	SHARED PARENTING A shared parenting meeting between the parent(s) and placement provider(s) should occur as soon as possible to ensure that the partnership has a strong beginning and is supported by the county child welfare services agency. When the parent and placement provider meet the day the child(ren) enters county custody, the adults can share information about the child(ren) that will make the transition for the child(ren) must less difficult. The county child welfare worker should coach the parent through this first interaction to maintain focus on the needs of the child(ren). The foster parent and county child welfare worker should partner with the birth parent to maintain the parent’s connection to the child(ren) while continually focusing on the welfare of the child(ren). This connection can preserve and/or rebuild the relationship, leading to long-term good outcomes for the child(ren) and families. Shared parenting emphasizes foster parents as being a support to birth families instead of substitute caretakers.

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
AFTER PLACEMENT Within 7 calendar days following out-of-home placement the county child welfare services agency must: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Have face-to-face contact with the child(ren) to assess their adjustment to the placement, or • Document diligent efforts and a plan to address these requirements. The 7-day contact with the child(ren) is in addition to any contact or interaction with the child(ren) at time of placement. Within 7 days the county child welfare services agency must also: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide to the placement provider the Child Education Status (DSS-5245); • Ensure a medical exam occurs for the child(ren)—use the Health Summary Form - Initial (DSS-5206); • Have face-to-face contact with at least one placement provider (if more than one adult caretaker resides in the home) must occur within 7 days after the day of placement. the placement provider in the provider’s home; and/or • Document diligent efforts and the plan to address these requirements. See Permanency Planning in the NC Child Welfare manual for additional After Placement requirements.

Temporary Safety Providers & Kinship Providers

Policy
When during provision of child welfare services the child(ren) is placed in the care of a provider other than the parent or caretaker, the county child welfare services agency must remain involved and maintain the required contacts with the child(ren), the family providing placement, and the family until safety can be assured and the child(ren) can be reunified with the family or until the child(ren) is in a legally secure placement, whether it be custody or guardianship or adoption. Parents must be involved, as well as the safety provider, with the county child welfare services agency in planning at every stage of the case.
Definitions
Safety Provider: Any person or persons (either Temporary Safety Provider or Kinship Provider) that is not the parent or caretaker but is providing care for a child(ren) and is required for child safety.
Temporary Safety Provider (TSP): A voluntary, temporary intervention made between a parent and a county child welfare services agency during the delivery of child protective services. TSPs are used to address immediate safety threats to a child(ren) when a child(ren) is found unsafe in the care of their parents/caretakers during child protective services. TSP's must only be used when less intrusive safety interventions are not sufficient. TSPs may care for the child(ren) outside of their home or provide supervision of the parent's contact with the child(ren) in or outside of their home.
Kinship Provider: A relative or fictive/nonrelative kin identified or in place during Permanency Planning Services. Kinship is the self-defined relationship between two or more people and is based on biological, legal, and/or strong family-like ties. Identification of a Kinship Care Provider by a parent is desired; however, a parent may not always agree with the decision to evaluate or place the child(ren) with a specific kinship care provider. Placement with a Kinship Care Provider often lasts for months or years, must have court oversight, and addresses safety and/or risk factors.
Nonrelative Kin: An individual having a substantial relationship with the juvenile. In the case of a juvenile member of a state-recognized tribe as set forth in N.C.G.S. 143B-407(a), nonrelative kin also include any member of a state-recognized tribe or a member of a federally recognized tribe, whether or not there is a substantial relationship with the juvenile.

INITIATING USE OF A SAFETY PROVIDER, TEMPORARY SAFETY PROVIDER, OR KINSHIP PROVIDER When a TSP or Kinship Provider is identified, the following must occur prior to the child(ren) being left in the care of the provider: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Background checks, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Criminal check. A review of ACIS for any criminal charges or convictions in North Carolina through the AOC database or equivalent; ○ Check of Civil Case Processing System (VCAP) for civil actions such as domestic violence protective orders; and ○ Review of county child welfare services, and or services history through NC FAST, agency records and RIL records. Complete the DSS-5268 RIL Information Request form by having the prospective placement complete applicant information and acknowledgement sections. County child welfare agencies must complete a search of the RIL register by completing both a “Search by SSN” (RIL050FM) and a “Search by Name” (RIL060FM) for each prospective placement. The completed RIL050FM and RIL060FM, regardless of whether there are any findings or not, must be printed. The printout of the RIL checks and the signed DSS-5268 must include the date the search was completed and be retained by the county child welfare agency in the child(ren) file. • Initial Provider Assessment, DSS-5203, which includes a home visit, as evidenced by county child welfare worker and provider signatures. • Approval of the Initial Provider Assessment by the county child welfare services agency supervisor. Approval at the time of the assessment may be verbal. The Initial Provider Assessment must be signed by the supervisor within 3 days. • Documentation of all the above. CPS Central Registry check for previous CPS involvement must be completed prior to	INITIATING USE OF A SAFETY PROVIDER, TEMPORARY SAFETY PROVIDER, OR KINSHIP PROVIDER ASSIST can be used to complete provider background checks, but results should be validated. Critical information for the relative or kin considering taking the child(ren) into their home is the potential for adoption down the road, even if that is not the plan at the time. If the child(ren) has never been in the custody of a county child welfare services agency before being adopted, Adoption Assistance is not an option. If that relative or kin later adopts the child(ren), they cannot receive Adoption Assistance. Relatives need to understand that the county child welfare services agency may be involved and not have custody; therefore, it is critical because of future implications as described above, that the county child welfare services agency is very clear about this when working with relatives. In some cases, the county child welfare services agency may file a petition for abuse or neglect and obtain a non-secure custody order. At the adjudication/disposition, the county child welfare services agency may recommend custody be awarded to the relative or kinship caregiver. Adoption Assistance later would be an option because the child(ren) was in the custody of a county child welfare services agency, though briefly.

Temporary Safety Providers & Kinship Providers

use of a TSP (for open CPS Assessment and In Home cases).

When a TSP will be supervising contact of the parent with their child(ren) and not providing care in the Safety Provider's residence, some aspects of the Initial Provider Assessment are not required as defined in the instructions. All background checks must still be completed.

A review of 911 call logs for the address of all TSP or Kinship Providers must also occur. As this cannot always be completed within the timeframe necessary to assess and approve use of a TSP or Kinship Provider, it must be completed within one week.

At the first conversations with relatives or kin about having the child(ren) placed with them, either by the parent with county child welfare involvement, or by the county child welfare services agency through court order, all options must be explained. This should occur throughout the case when changes in the planning occur.

Temporary Safety Providers & Kinship Providers

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
USE OF TEMPORARY SAFETY PROVIDERS (CPS ASSESSMENTS & IN-HOME SERVICES) The county child welfare services agency must assess the TSP and their residence (assessment of the provider’s residence is not required when the TSP moves into the family home or supervises contact with a parent at a location not within the TSP’s residence) when it is determined that a TSP is necessary to ensure safety, either through: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The child(ren) staying in the residence of the TSP or • A TSP moving into the family home to supervise parental contact. The TSP must be someone that both parents and the county child welfare worker agree will safely care for the child(ren). Use of a TSP must be a last resort and must not be done if an intervention can be identified that will keep the child(ren) safe without separation or restriction of a parent’s access. Use of a TSP must be voluntary. A county child welfare worker must never attempt to coerce a parent into agreeing to a TSP. When use of a TSP is proposed, a CFT meeting must be held. If at any time the parent is not in agreement with the need for the contact to be supervised, the county child welfare services agency must file a petition in juvenile court. If the proposed TSP lives in another county, the county child welfare worker must ask the TSP’s county for permission to enter the county for the purposes of conducting the home visit and Initial Provider Assessment. Whenever the Safety Assessment determines an intervention requiring separation or restriction of a parent’s access to their child(ren) is necessary and the family names a TSP that resides in another state, the agency conducting the CPS-A must file a juvenile petition and request non-secure custody and comply with Interstate/Intercountry Services for Children ICPC policy. The only exception is for CPS-A cases for families that reside in counties that have a border agreement with a neighboring state. MONITORING USE OF A TEMPORARY SAFETY PROVIDER Contacts with each child in the care of a TSP must: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Occur in the home at least once a month and • Occur at the frequency required to monitor safety and risk. USE OF KINSHIP PROVIDERS (DURING PERMANENCY PLANNING SERVICES) Placement with relatives, nonrelative kin, the child’s former foster parent who was deemed appropriate, or other persons with legal custody of a sibling, must be considered for child(ren) who are removed from their homes and in the custody of a county child welfare services agency. To maximize the possibility of a positive kinship placement, a thorough assessment must be conducted to evaluate the suitability of the placement. See Initiating Use of Safety Provider. Monitoring Kinship Providers For Permanency Planning cases, the Comprehensive Provider Assessment (DSS-5204) must be completed for Kinship Providers: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • When use of the Kinship Provider continues over 29 days after the case is transferred to Permanency Planning, or • When use of the Kinship Provider initiates during Permanency Planning Services and continues in use over 29 days after it was initiated. The Comprehensive Provider Assessment must be completed within 30 days of the child(ren) entering custody if the child(ren) is already placed out of the home, or within 30 days of the child(ren)’s placement in the home of the kinship provider (if placed after entering custody). In addition to completing the initial and comprehensive assessment, agency staff must maintain sufficient contact with the kinship care provider and the child(ren) to assure that the basic physical and emotional needs of the child(ren) are being met and that the kinship care provider is receiving adequate informal and formal support to meet those needs. Whether the home is licensed as a foster home, county child welfare workers must maintain contact as designated in Permanency Planning protocol.	USE OF KINSHIP PROVIDERS Providing all information to a kinship provider is a very important part of concurrent planning and provides the kinship care provider with valuable information that has implications later, especially as plans for permanency change for the child(ren) as time goes on. It is critical that the agency demonstrate sensitivity to the unique issues that are present when relatives and other kin are assessed for their suitability to parent child(ren). Assessment should be based on an understanding of the kinship family’s culture and community, child rearing approaches, and family dynamics, and should focus on the ability of the family to meet the immediate and ongoing needs of the child(ren). If kin are determined to be suitable for the care and nurturing of the child(ren), but the home cannot meet all foster care licensing requirements, the agency may submit justification for a waiver to the Regulatory and Licensing office, NCDSS. In North Carolina, many licensure requirements may be considered for waiver if approval is in the best interest of the child(ren), if the health, safety and protection of the child is assured, and if the county child welfare services agency recommends that the waiver(s) be granted. There are no waivers for training requirements, for well inspection requirements, or for placements that have outside toilet facilities.

Domestic Violence

Purpose

Following are the six principles developed through the Child Well-Being and Domestic Violence Task Force to address the intersection of child safety, permanence, well-being, and domestic violence.

- Enhancing a non-offending parent/adult victim's safety enhances their child(ren)'s safety.
- Domestic violence perpetrators may cause serious harm to the child(ren).
- Domestic violence perpetrators, not their victims, should be held accountable for their actions and the impact on the well-being of the non-offending parent/adult victim and child victims.
- Appropriate services, tailored to the degree of violence and risk, should be available for non-offending parent/adult victims leaving, returning to, or staying in abusive relationships. These services should also be available for child victims and perpetrators of domestic violence.
- Child(ren) should remain in the care of the non-offending parent/adult victim whenever possible.
- When the risk of harm to the child(ren) outweighs the detriment of being separated from the non-offending parent/adult victim, alternative placement should be considered.

The primary focus in cases involving domestic violence is the assessment of risk posed to the child(ren) by the presence of domestic violence. The goals of CPS interventions in cases involving domestic violence are:

- Ensure the safety of the child(ren).
- All family members will be safe from harm.
- The non-offending parent/adult victim will receive services designed to protect and support them.
- The child(ren) will receive services designed to protect, support, and help them cope with the effects of domestic violence.
- The alleged perpetrator of domestic violence will be held responsible for their abusive behavior.
- The incidence of child maltreatment co-occurring with domestic violence will be reduced.

The challenge in providing CPS interventions in domestic violence situations is to keep the child(ren) safe without:

- Penalizing the non-offending parent/adult victim and
- Escalating the violent behavior of the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence.

Domestic Violence

Definition	Legal Basis
Domestic violence is defined as the establishment of control and fear in an intimate relationship using violence and other forms of abuse including but not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Physical abuse, • Emotional abuse, • Sexual abuse, • Economic oppression, • Isolation, • Threats, • Intimidation, and • Maltreatment of the children to control the non-offending parent/adult victim. While victims and families may experience and be affected by domestic violence in different ways, there are still core aspects of domestic violence that are consistent across racial, socio-economic, educational, and religious lines: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The primary goal of a domestic violence perpetrator is to obtain and maintain power and control over their partner. • While domestic violence may “present” as an incident of violence or neglect, it is rather a pattern of abuse, which may include violent incidents. • Domestic violence is not simply discord between intimate partners but rather a progressive, intentional, patterned use of abusive behaviors. 	The N.C.G.S. § Chapter 50-B also defines domestic violence according to the relationship between the parties and behaviors or actions that constitute domestic violence, as well as its available relief. North Carolina General Statutes also identify certain misdemeanor and felony criminal offenses that often occur in the context of domestic violence, such as assault, stalking, violation of a Domestic Violence Protection Order, domestic criminal trespass, harassing telephone calls, communicating a threat, and strangulation.

Domestic Violence

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
INTERACTION WITH NON-OFFENDING PARENT/CARETAKER The non-offending parent/adult victim must never be placed in danger by having to be interviewed, develop safety plans, or meet with the perpetrator of violence against them.	Each parent or caretaker is only responsible for their own actions to provide safe, nurturing care for their child(ren). INTERACTION WITH NON-OFFENDING PARENT/CARETAKER The Non-Offending Parent/Adult Victim Domestic Violence Assessment Tool (DSS-5235) contains scaled assessment questions and should be used to support the determination of safety and risk factors. The inability to speak with the non-offending parent/adult victim alone may be an indication of the level of control the perpetrator of domestic violence exerts over the family, and an indication of high risk. The presence of relatives or friends may also affect disclosure and safety. Information concerning resources and referrals to services should immediately be given to the non-offending parent/adult victim and child(ren) (as appropriate). With cases involving domestic violence, the safety of child(ren) is closely linked to the safety of the non-offending parent/adult victim. So, domestic violence cases also include a secondary focus on the safety of the adult victim. The non-offending parent/adult victim of domestic violence is the expert at predicting the domestic violence perpetrator’s reactions. Therefore, development of the family safety plan or services agreement is driven by the non-offending parent/adult victim based on what they think they are capable of and willing to do to ensure safety for their child(ren) and themselves. A Safety Plan is a tool used by domestic violence advocates in providing services to non-offending parents/adult victims. The Personalized Domestic Violence Safety Plan (DSS-5233) contains suggested steps that may be useful for county child welfare agencies in: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Safety planning with the non-offending parent/adult victim and • Assisting in the development of service agreements.

Domestic Violence

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
INTERACTION WITH THE CHILD(REN) The child(ren) must not be interviewed in the presence of the alleged perpetrator of the domestic violence incident. It is appropriate to interview the child(ren) in the presence of the non-offending parent/adult victim as circumstances allow, and when the safety of the child(ren) is not compromised. Information obtained from the non-offending parent/adult victim or child(ren) that may jeopardize their safety must not be shared, especially with the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence. Sharing	Keep in mind that a perpetrator (or their legal representative) can subpoena the contents of a case file. For the protection of the victim, the county child welfare services agency should make decisions on where and how domestic violence safety plans are maintained. To develop and monitor a coordinated services plan for every case with domestic violence, the county child welfare worker should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Seek out and utilize the consultation of a domestic violence expert throughout the life of the case. • Communicate with a domestic violence perpetrator’s probation or parole officer regarding any current abuse. • Reach out and make connections with school social workers and teachers to gain information about the child(ren)’s day-to-day functioning. • Work closely with Work First to create plans together. This is especially true when Work First may already be providing or can assist in referring a family for domestic violence services. INTERACTION WITH THE CHILD(REN) The Children’s Domestic Violence Assessment Tool, DSS-5237, contains scaled assessment questions and should be used to support the determination of the safety and risk factors. Every child reacts differently when exposed to domestic violence. Some child(ren) develop debilitating conditions, while others show no negative effects from the exposure to violence. As a result, it is important to interview the child(ren) regarding their involvement and/or exposure to domestic violence, as well as their general safety and well-being. It is important to recognize that older child(ren) are more likely to minimize reports of parental fighting. Younger child(ren) may be more spontaneous and less guarded with the information they share. See Impact on Children section of the Cross Function topic of Risk.

Domestic Violence

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
information that may seem inconsequential—specifically information about the non-offending/adult victim’s whereabouts and/or schedule if they have left the home/relationship—can place the child(ren) and non-offending parent/adult victim in danger.	INTERACTION WITH THE ALLEGED PERPETRATOR The Domestic Violence Perpetrator Assessment Tool (DSS-5234) contains scaled assessment questions and should be used to support the determination of the safety and risk factors. Interaction with the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence provides the opportunity to observe and document behaviors relative to the allegations, both positive and “concerning.” This observation supplements information obtained from: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Police reports; • Criminal records; • Hospital/medical records; • The child(ren); and • The non-offending parent/adult victim. It is important to note that the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence may attempt to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Present themselves as the “victim”; • Charm the county child welfare worker; • Gain control of the interview; and/or • Deny any domestic violence, insisting that the relationship is “perfect.” During interaction with the perpetrator, the county child welfare worker should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Focus on information from third party reports such as law enforcement, medical providers, or the Administrative Office of the Courts. • Follow up on legal accountability and/or treatment and other service referrals for the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence.

Domestic Violence

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Convey to the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence that based on what happened (citing as much information as possible without compromising confidentiality or safety of the child(ren), non-offending parent/adult victim, and/or the reporter) they will be required to take steps to stop the violence and ensure that the child(ren) are safe. • Avoid debates and arguments with the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence. This is crucial. The focus of CPS is not to convince the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence to admit violent behavior but discuss how to ensure the child(ren)’s safety with them. • Set limits within the interaction with the alleged perpetrator of domestic violence and document the behaviors that make setting limits necessary and their capacity to respect those efforts. COLLATERAL CONTACTS <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • It should be remembered that domestic violence usually occurs in private and collaterals may not always be aware of the violence. • Collateral contacts being unaware of the occurrence of violence does not mean that it is not happening.

Child Well-Being

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance – How you should do it
CHILD WELL-BEING All child well-being needs or any lack of medical, dental, mental health, or other care of the child must be: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Assessed during the provision of all child welfare services, • Addressed by the county child welfare services agency or through service referrals, • Reviewed during development and review of Family Services Agreements, and • Documented (all the above). Any physical, dental, developmental, psychological, and educational needs must be addressed, and appropriate assessments scheduled within one week from the identification of the need. To facilitate meeting the above, all open In-Home and Permanency Planning Services cases must include, at a minimum, current copies of: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Medical exam(s) current within the last year, • Dental exam(s) current within the last year, • Mental health or substance abuse treatment plan(s) current within the last year if the child has an associated need, • Educational reports (academic and behavior) within the last year if the child is of school age, and/or • Diligent efforts to obtain the above documentation. Requests for this documentation must occur within the first month of ongoing (In-Home and Permanency Planning) cases. Child and Family Team (CFT) Meetings

Purpose
Child and Family Teams (CFT) are family members and their community support that come together to create, implement, and update a plan for the child(ren), youth, and family. The purpose of a CFT meeting is to: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Reach agreement on which identified child welfare issues will be addressed and how they will be addressed throughout the life of the case;• Develop a Family Service Agreement or safety plan that is created using the best ideas of the family, informal, and formal supports that the family believes in, the agency approves of, and lessens risk and heightens safety for the child/youth and family; and• Plan for how all participants will take part in, support, and implement the Family Service Agreement or safety plan developed by the team. A CFT meeting is a way to engage and partner with all the people who surround a family and to support the family in building a support network that will eventually sustain it after the case is closed. A CFT meeting is a way for county child welfare agencies to share responsibility for protecting children/youth with their families and the community.
Definition
CFT meetings are structured, guided discussions with the family, their natural supports, and other team members about family strengths, needs, and problems and the impact they have on the safety, permanence, and well-being of the family’s child(ren) and youth. The meetings share the following components: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• A clear but open-ended purpose;• An opportunity for the family to be involved in decision-making and planning;• Options for the family to consider and decisions for the family to make;• The family’s involvement in the development of specific safety or permanent plans and in the development of services and supports; and• The outcome of the meeting will be reflected in the development or revision of a Family Services Agreement or a safety plan. The primary focus must always be the safety and well-being of the child(ren) and youth. A meeting is not a CFT meeting: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• When a decision or plan has been made and there is no room for input from family and natural supports;• When the family (either biological or fictive) are not present; and• When the goal of the meeting is primarily information gathering, rather than case planning. While these fact-finding meetings are important and useful, they are not CFT meetings, and they may hinder the family’s trust in county child welfare staff and services and ultimately negatively affect child welfare outcomes.

Child and Family Team (CFT) Meetings

Protocol -What Must Occur	Guidance – How it Should be Done
All CFTs must have a clear purpose and provide an opportunity for the family to be involved in decision-making and planning. The county child welfare worker and/or the facilitator must assure that the ideas of the family and its natural supports are considered with the same weight as those of the professionals in the room. Non-resident parents (who may or may not be non-custodial parents) must be involved in the CFT meeting unless there is a valid conflict or safety issue, and this must be clearly documented in the case record. Children and youth must be involved in the CFT meeting. Participation of the child(ren) and/or youth and/or their input to the CFT must be clearly documented in the case record. The county child welfare worker, supervisor, and facilitator (if there is one) must ensure that physical and psychological safety is not compromised by the CFT meeting process. If the county child welfare services agency determines that a CFT cannot be held safely, there must not be a CFT meeting. A facilitator, who is neither the county child welfare worker for the family nor the supervisor of that county child welfare worker, must be used in cases with a	“Family” is a term that should be defined by the members. This is especially true when working with cases where the birth parents are no longer involved. When this is the case, there should be an in-depth conversation with the child(ren) and/or youth about whom they consider as family. Knowing that the people chosen for the team are likely to sustain the child(ren) and/or youth after the agency is no longer involved, it is important to keep an open mind and be creative in finding ways to support not only the child(ren) and/or youth but also those seen as family. While parental wishes about who is invited to the CFT are to be considered and respected, it is important that the county child welfare worker be diligent in helping the family to expand the circle that will sustain them. When parents or caretakers are reluctant to hold a family meeting or invite critical participants, county child welfare workers must seek to understand the source of the reluctance and how the safety and comfort of the parents or caretakers can be achieved while still ensuring the presence of people critical to the lives of the child(ren) and youth. The child(ren)’s wishes are also to be considered. There may be times when the parent is uncomfortable with inviting someone the child(ren) may desire to have present. A balance should be found between the parents’ wishes, the child(ren)’s wishes, and what is necessary to achieve the purpose of the meeting. Critical participants in addition to the family members at a CFT meeting should include but not be limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Involved professional providers, • Relatives, and • Safety providers. It is not a question of whether the child(ren) and youth should be involved in the process, but rather how they should be involved in the process. While it is natural to want to protect child(ren) and youth from hearing traumatic details, they have already lived through much of what will be discussed. There are several things to consider when

These include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The child(ren) and youth’s own wishes. • The child(ren) and youth’s developmental and cognitive abilities. • If the child(ren) and youth is in counseling, the therapist should be consulted about what kind of involvement is best. Having the child(ren) and youth take part in a CFT meeting will not look the same in every meeting. Below are a few suggestions: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Full participation in the entire meeting – preferably with a support person and/or mentor; • Partial participation in the beginning or the end; • Attendance, but with little participation; some children and youth may want to be present but may not be comfortable speaking; • Participation without attendance could be achieved through a spokesperson, reading a letter they have written, recording a message or by phone; • For very young, pre-verbal children, having their picture in the room can be a powerful way to keep the meeting focused on the child. When a child and/or youth participates in a CFT meeting, it will be very important to prepare them. Use of a neutral facilitator is best practice for all CFT meetings. Below is a list of circumstances in which a facilitator might be especially helpful: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Cases in which there is conflict or volatility; • Large or complicated family systems; • Difficult issues in accessing family members due to distance, incarceration, disability, or other factors; • Strained relationships between family members and county child welfare workers; • Complex situations such as those involving multi-generational abuse, neglect, sexual abuse, substance abuse, domestic violence, or mental illness; and • Extensive cultural and language differences between the county child welfare

Consider factors such as, but not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Have there been any threats of harm, use of weapons, escalation or increase in frequency of the threats or conflict, or criminal involvement? ○ Is there a history of mental illness? ○ Is there a history of substance abuse? ● Be sure the planning process for CFT meetings includes the question of whether there are any court-sanctioned protective orders between family members. Do not conduct a meeting that violates protective orders. It may be helpful to consult an attorney about whether a person who is the subject of a protective order may participate by phone. Cases with domestic violence or family violence may require separate CFT meetings. ● Where there is a history of violence or a concern for potential violence, consider, but don’t limit considerations to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Choose a safe, neutral location; ○ Have support people or mentors for threatened or potentially volatile family members; ○ Have some members participate through pre-meeting interviews, written statements, or conference calls; ○ Arrange for a private check-in after the meeting with any vulnerable participants; ○ Arrange for vulnerable family members or those in conflict with one another to arrive at and leave the meeting separately, or to be escorted by staff or security personnel; and/or ○ Arrange for the presence of security and/or law enforcement.

Parent Engagement (including Non-Resident Parents) and Needs Assessment

Policy
Efforts to locate and engage all maternal and all paternal parents must occur during all phases of child welfare, unless the court has terminated parental rights.
Definitions
Birth Parent: genetic, biological, or natural parents. Residential Parent: In child welfare it is the parent with whom the child(ren) primarily resides. See Juvenile Court for definitions regarding juvenile court. Also, refer to the course “Legal Aspects of Child Welfare in North Carolina” for information regarding both NC Statute Chapter 7B and North Carolina Administrative Code 10 N.C.A.C.70A through 10 N.C.A.C.700 for the rules most relevant to child welfare. Keep in mind that definitions in North Carolina statute can vary from statute to statute, depending on the context with which the term is applied. For example, in North Carolina guardianship law, Chapter 35A, the clerk of the court will decide if the person is incompetent and requires a guardian. This is a different context of the term guardianship than what is used in juvenile court in awarding guardianship. For this reason, county child welfare workers must be careful in their use of terminology and consult with their county attorney as needed. During provision of Permanency Planning Services, Chapter 7B should be the primary statute for consideration. During provision of CPS-A or In-Home Services, county child welfare workers may need to refer to Chapter 50 regarding child custody and/or domestic violence court.

PATERNITY

All the following information comes from Child Support Services Manual and is provided as information only. Child Support policy and Child Welfare policy (and Juvenile Court) vary on key aspects, especially in defining when paternity testing is required. When collaborating with Child Support Services, this information may be of value.

ESTABLISHING PATERNITY

If paternity has not been determined (either voluntarily or by court order) and no judicial action to establish paternity has been filed with the court, paternity testing can be initiated by agreement of the parties involved.

Testing by agreement is NOT appropriate if:

- An Affidavit of Parentage has been signed and has not been rescinded;
- A judicial action for paternity has been filed; or
- A court order of paternity has been entered.

For more information, specifically regarding establishment of paternity and paternity testing, see also CSS Paternity Policy.

PATERNITY TESTING RESULTS

These results have the following effect if ordered under N.C.G.S. § 8-50.1:

- Probability of paternity is less than eighty-five percent (85%) - The alleged father is presumed NOT to be the parent.
- Probability of paternity is between eighty-five (85%) and ninety-seven percent (97%) - The results have same weight as other evidence.
- Probability of paternity is ninety-seven percent (97%) or higher - The alleged father is presumed to be the parent.

USING PREVIOUSLY COLLECTED TEST SAMPLES

Paternity test samples and test results for individuals who are tested under the state contract that are maintained by the testing laboratory can be used in subsequent testing conducted under this contract. Rather than collecting new samples, using existing samples or results can reduce the time and cost of subsequent testing. DNA samples or results obtained for testing under the state contract can be reused for subsequent tests, including:

- New testing for the same mother/ child/ father group.
- Testing of an individual in a different mother/ child/ father group.
- Testing that was conducted by the county which requested the initial test sample.
- Testing that was conducted by a different county than the initial requesting county.

Parent Engagement (including Non-Resident Parents) and Needs Assessment

EXCLUSION OF ALLEGED FATHER

Paternity testing that results in the exclusion of a man as the biological father of a child does not constitute a legal determination of non-paternity. However, test results are evidence that the court can consider in making such a determination.

If paternity testing excludes the alleged father as the biological father of a child, the appropriate course of action is based on whether a judicial or voluntary determination of paternity has been made, a marital presumption of paternity exists, or the child has no legally responsible father.

If a judicial or voluntary determination of paternity has been entered:

- Exclusionary test results do not void that determination.
- Test results can be used as evidence in a motion or independent action to disestablish paternity.
- The paternity determination remains in effect until a court makes a ruling.

If a marital presumption of paternity exists:

- Exclusionary test results do not invalidate the presumption of paternity.
- Test results can be presented as evidence in a judicial challenge of the presumption by the legal father.
- The presumption of paternity remains in effect until a court makes a ruling.

Legal Basis

42 U.S. Code § 671(a)(19) provides that the state shall consider giving preference to an adult relative over a non-related caregiver when determining a placement for a child(ren), provided that the relative caregiver meets all relevant state child protection standards.

42 U.S. Code § 671(a)(19) provides that, within 30 days after the removal of a child from the custody of the parent or parents of the child, the state shall exercise due diligence to identify and provide notice to the following relatives: all adult grandparents, all parents of a sibling of the child, where such parent has legal custody of such sibling, and other adult relatives of the child (including any other adult relatives suggested by the parents), subject to exceptions due to family or domestic violence, that:

- a. Specifies that the child has been or is being removed from the custody of the parent or parents of the child;
- b. Explains the options the relative has under federal, state, and local law to participate in the care and placement of the child, including any options that may be lost by failing to respond to the notice;
- c. Describes the requirements to become a foster family home and the additional services and supports that are available for children placed in such a home; and
- d. If the state has elected the option to make kinship guardianship assistance payments, describes how the relative guardian of the child may subsequently enter into an agreement with the state to receive the payments.

N.C.G.S. §7B-505, Requirements for Placement with Relatives:

- (b) The court shall order the department to make diligent efforts to notify relatives and other persons with legal custody of a sibling of the juvenile that the juvenile is in non-secure custody and of any hearings scheduled to occur pursuant to G.S. 7B-506, unless the court finds the notification would be contrary to the best interests of the juvenile. In placing a juvenile in non-secure custody under this section, the court shall first consider whether a relative of the juvenile is willing and able to provide proper care and supervision of the juvenile in a safe home. If the court finds that the relative is willing and able to provide proper care and supervision in a safe home, then the court shall order placement of the juvenile with the relative unless the court finds that placement with the relative would be contrary to the best interests of the juvenile.
- (c) If the court does not place the juvenile with a relative, the court may consider whether nonrelative kin or other persons with legal custody of a sibling of the juvenile are willing and able to provide proper care and supervision of the juvenile in a safe home. The court may order the department to notify the juvenile's state-recognized tribe of the need for non-secure custody for the purpose of locating relatives or nonrelative kin for placement. The court may order placement of the juvenile with nonrelative kin if the court finds the placement is in the juvenile's best interests.

Identifying, Locating, & Engaging Extended Family Members

Protocol	Guidance
At least once a month throughout the case, county child welfare workers must inquire with parents and child(ren)ren about extended family members to include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Knowledge of (names, when last seen); • Location (address, contact information); • Contact with (telephone, Facebook, etc.); or • Relationships (history with that relative, support that relative may be able to provide, etc.). For states to meet the requirements of IV-E federal funding for foster care and adoption assistance, states must “consider giving preference to an adult relative over a nonrelated caregiver when determining placement for a child(ren), provided that the relative caregiver meets all relevant state child protection standards.” IV-E requires states to apply due diligence to identify and provide notice to all grandparents and other adult relatives of the child(ren) regarding: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The fact that the child(ren) has been or is being removed from the custody of their parents; • The options the relative available to participate in the care and placement of the child(ren); and • The requirements to become a foster parent to the child(ren). 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ https://www.facebook.com/ RECONNECTING WITH A RELATIVE Consideration must be given to the impact of any new or renewed connection to an extended relative. Although this connection is in general a positive event, there may be other extenuating circumstances that should be understood, including the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> a. Families have a primary need to know what happened to “lost” relatives. While youth in foster care are not considered to be lost child(ren), the child(ren), their relatives, or individuals who had a close relationship to the child(ren) continue to have a desire to know how their loved ones are doing. A majority of youth who’ve been adopted report a desire to find or be found by their birth parents and/or other extended family members. b. Identification and location of extended family won’t solve the psychological problems that can affect youth in foster care. Being in foster care has a life-altering effect on youth and families. The loss of connections, disruption to the life cycle, and number of transitions can be very traumatic even to resilient child(ren)/youth. Maintaining or reestablishing family connections may provide support to help youth and families heal. c. The process of locating and engaging families can open family wounds, rekindling the problems surrounding the child(ren)’s birth or removal. Numerous issues and questions may arise. It is the role of the county child welfare services agency to facilitate all contact to avoid situations involving blame, to ensure that all interaction acknowledges the youth’s current situation and need for wraparound support. d. Each person, conservatively, has about 100-300 living relatives. e. Permanence for youth in care is more than a legal goal. It involves the stability and continuity of relationships that are meaningful to individuals. Permanence incorporates a sense of belonging and cultural and social connections to a child(ren)/youth’s background and permanent home.

MULTIETHNIC PLACEMENT ACT

Policy and Definitions	Legal Basis
All state and county agencies that use federal funds must comply with the Multiethnic Placement Act (MEPA) of 1994 as amended in 1996 by the Interethnic Adoption Provisions (MEPA-IEP). The Act prohibits states or agencies that receive federal funds from delaying or denying the placement of any child for adoption or into foster care based on the race, color, or national origin of the individual, or the child involved. Therefore, failing to place a child with a prospective parent because the parent is a specific, or different race, color, or national origin from that of the child; or removing a child from a prospective parent because the parent or child is a specific race, color or national origin is a direct violation of MEPA-IEP. The Act also prohibits denying any individual the opportunity to become an adoptive or foster parent, on the basis of the race, color, or national origin of the individual, or of the child involved. Therefore, training shall be offered to all individuals in consideration of foster home licensure. Agencies are prohibited from acting on a child or parent’s preference for a same race placement. Any consideration of race, color, or national origin must be done in the context of individualized needs of the child and must advance the best interest of the child, with the rationale specifically documented in the placement record. All state and county agencies using federal Title IV-E funds must comply with MEPA-IEP. This includes contract and sub-recipient child-placing agencies who receive federal funding for the placement of child in foster care.	MEPA MEPA is designed to “prevent discrimination in the placement of child(ren) in foster care and adoption on the basis of race, color, or national origin; decrease the length of time that child(ren) wait to be adopted; and facilitate the identification and recruitment of foster and adoptive parents.” The best strategy for full compliance with the MEPA is a comprehensive recruitment strategy that targets the general public and also specifically targets those communities that reflect the racial and ethnic diversity of your foster care population. An agency may not rely on generalizations about the needs of child(ren) of a particular race or ethnicity, or on generalizations about the abilities of prospective parents of one race or ethnicity to care for a child(ren) of another race or ethnicity. Any violation of MEPA-IEP will be deemed a violation of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act.

Protocol – What you must do

MEPA-IEP PLACEMENT REQUIREMENTS (INITIAL AND PLACEMENT CHANGES)

Every agency must have a diligent recruitment and retention plan to comply with MEPA-IEP. The major thrust of MEPA-IEP's recruitment requirements is that agencies provide for the diligent recruitment of potential foster and adoptive families that reflect the ethnic and racial diversity of children in the state or county for whom foster and adoptive homes are needed. Federal guidelines specifically call for a thorough diligent recruitment and retention plan that includes both general and targeted campaigns and encompasses the following features:

- A description of the characteristics of waiting children (i.e., age, race, time in care, special needs, etc.);
- Specific strategies to reach all community members through a general media campaign such as radio, television, and print;
- Diverse methods of disseminating both general and child-specific information to targeted communities through community organizations such as churches and other religious institutions.
- Strategies for assuring that all prospective foster and adoptive families throughout the community have equitable access to the home study process, including location and hours of services that facilitate access by all members of the community.
- Strategies for training foster and adoptive staff in cultural, racial and economic diversity.
- Strategies for dealing with linguistic barriers.
- Assurance of non-discriminatory fee structures.
- Procedures ensuring a timely search for prospective parents awaiting a child, including the use of exchanges and other inter-agency efforts, provided that such procedures ensure that the placement of a child in an appropriate household is not delayed by the search for a same race or ethnic placement.

To comply with MEPA-IEP requirements, each county's diligent recruitment and retention plan must include the above-listed features. In addition, each plan must also include the following information:

- Partnerships with agencies and individuals from the communities in which foster children come from to help identify and support potential foster and adoptive families, to enhance the agency's ability to reach various populations, and to conduct activities which make waiting children more visible.
- Strategies to ensure community members have access to information about waiting children and supports that are available to foster and adoptive families.

INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT OF 1978 (ICWA)

Policy	Legal Basis
The Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) of 1978 established nationwide procedures for the handling of Indian child placements and authorized the establishment of Indian child and family service programs. The act requires specific actions on behalf of a child who is a member of a federally recognized Indian Tribe, Aleuts, or members of certain native Alaskan villagers. Whenever it is suspected that a child may fit into any of these populations, the procedures outlined in this Act must be followed. Nothing in ICWA is to be construed as preventing the emergency removal of an Indian child to prevent imminent physical damage or harm to that child(ren). If a county child welfare worker believes that a child(ren) is in imminent danger, the same procedures are followed as in any other emergency removal.	ICWA specifies that tribal courts have exclusive jurisdiction of child(ren) who reside on the reservation. If the child(ren) is a ward of a tribal court, but does not reside on a reservation, the jurisdiction of the case must be transferred to the tribal court. In any action leading to a foster care placement or in any termination of parental rights action affecting an American Indian child who does not reside on the reservation, the parents, guardian or custodian of the child(ren) may petition for transfer of jurisdiction to a tribal court. At any time during proceedings of a foster care placement the American Indian custodian and American Indian tribe have the right to intervene in the proceedings at any time. Tribal courts have the same authority as any state court and any decisions made by them that follow the ICWA guidelines have the effect of any other court decision. N.C.G.S. § 7B-505(c) (http://www.ncleg.net/EnactedLegislation/Statutes/HTML/BySection/Chapter_7B/GS_7B-505.html) was added in 2013 to provide changes to the placement of child(ren) while in non-secure custody. It enacted a new subsection to expand types of placements available to a child(ren) in non-secure custody by identifying individuals who may not be relatives but have a substantial relationship with the child(ren). These individuals are defined as “non-relative kin”. It also gives additional placement options for American Indian child(ren) who are members of a state recognized tribe by defining non-relative kin to include members of state or federally recognized tribes regardless of the relationship with the child(ren). One purpose of this change is to allow placement of child(ren) from state recognized tribes with American Indian families when in their best interest, given that state tribes are not protected by ICWA. This change also encourages these placements be made at the onset of the case and only when the placement is in the child(ren)’s best interest. The Act does not apply to a placement based on an act which, if committed by an adult would be deemed a crime (as in any situation in which a child was adjudicated delinquent and placed in foster care or a group home), or upon an award, in a divorce proceeding, of custody to one of the parents. MEPA-IEP specifically provides that it has no effect on the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978.

Indian: An Indian is defined as any person who is a member of an Indian tribe, or who is an Alaskan Native and a member of a Regional Corporation, as defined in the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. Indian Child: An Indian child means any unmarried person who is under 18 and is either (a) a member of an Indian tribe; or (b) is eligible for membership in an Indian tribe and is the biological child of a member of an Indian tribe. Tribes determine their own standards for membership eligibility. Indian Tribe: Any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group of Indians recognized as eligible for the services provided to Indians by the Secretary of the Interior because of their status as Indians, including any Alaskan Native villager as defined in section 3(c) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. Indian Child's Tribe: An Indian child's tribe is defined as (a) the Indian tribe in which an Indian child is a member or eligible for membership or (b) in the case of an Indian child who is a member of or eligible for membership in more than one tribe, the Indian tribe with which the Indian child has the most significant contacts. Indian Reservation: Indian country as defined in Section 1151 of Title 18, United States Code and any lands, not covered under such section, title to which is either held by the United States in trust for any Indian tribe or individual subject to a restriction by the United States against alienation. The Act applies to Indian child custody proceedings and includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • County child welfare custody, when the parent or custodian cannot have the child returned on demand (as in Voluntary Placement Agreements), but where parental rights have not been terminated; • In termination of parental rights proceedings; • In pre-adoptive and adoptive placements; and • Proceedings regarding juvenile court assigned custody or guardianship of the person of the juvenile. 	Cherokee Family Support Services is the agency of the Eastern Band of the Cherokee that handles the cases that involve the Indian Child Welfare act. If there is belief that the child(ren) is a Cherokee Indian child, the county child welfare services agency can contact Cherokee Family Support Services at P.O. Box 507 Cherokee, North Carolina 28719. They can assist in checking with the enrollment office to determine whether the child(ren) is an "Indian child." If the child(ren) is an "Indian child," then Cherokee Family Services will be the representative of the tribe that will be involved in the case. Members of other federally-recognized tribes who live and work in North Carolina are afforded the protections of this Act. The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) has a listing updated each year of the appropriate tribal person to receive questions about membership and ICWA proceedings https://www.bia.gov/. The North Carolina Commission of Indian Affairs can help regarding local tribes and can also facilitate contact with tribal leadership for tribes located in other parts of the country. Many North Carolina Indians are members of state-recognized tribes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Coharie Tribe (Harnett and Sampson Counties); • The Haliwa-Saponi Tribe (Halifax and Warren Counties); • The Lumbee Tribe of North Carolina (Hoke, Robeson and Scotland Counties); • The Meherrin Indian Tribe (Hertford County);

Special Legal Considerations (MEPA, ICWA, Mexican Heritage)

The only federally-recognized tribal grounds in North Carolina are those of the Eastern Band of the Cherokee. STATE-RECOGNIZED TRIBES While the Indian Child Welfare Act protects members of federally-recognized tribes, child(ren) in state-recognized tribes merit similar consideration. N.C.G.S. § 143B-139.5A was enacted in 2001 to support collaboration between the Division of Social Services, the NC Directors of Social Services Association, and the Commission of Indian Affairs. The goal of this legislation is to create relationships, so tribes can receive reasonable notice when Indian child(ren) are placed in county child welfare custody or for adoption, recruitment of North Carolina Indians as foster and adoptive parents can be increased, and training on Indian culture and history can be provided to county child welfare workers and foster and adoptive parents. It is important to remember that the Multi Ethnic Placement Act (MEPA), as amended in 1996 by the Interethnic Placement Provisions (MEPA-IEP) applies to the placement of Indian child(ren) who are not covered by ICWA. When considering placement for any Indian child(ren), every effort should be made to involve the tribal community in planning for the child(ren) in a setting that reflects their Indian culture.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Occaneechi Band of Saponi Nation (Alamance and Orange Counties); • Sappony (Person County); and • Waccamaw-Siouan Development Association (Bladen and Columbus). Organizations: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Cumberland County Association for Indian People (Fayetteville); • The Guilford Native American Association (Greensboro); • Metrolina Native American Association (Charlotte); and • Triangle Native American Society (Raleigh).

The purpose of this agreement is to ensure that child(ren) and their families are afforded the opportunity to receive necessary services beneficial to them. The services guarantee the protection offered by the Vienna Convention, Bilateral Convention, and all other applicable treaties and laws. Specifically, case narrative must identify next steps, who is responsible, and by when they must be completed, if not covered on a form or other documentation. Case documentation must include case staffing notes and decision but must NOT include information regarding county child welfare worker performance (positive or negative) that is function of supervision.	NCDSS has developed forms that can be used in place of case narrative that support both objective narrative and subjective narrative (discussed below), including but not limited to the: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Monthly In-Home Services Contact Record • Monthly Permanency Planning Contact Record Additional case narrative may be required if the above forms do not cover all aspects of the home visit/contact. If all actions are captured on the form, no additional narrative is needed. Subjective Narrative Subjective narrative captures responses from case participants about how they are feeling, how the case is progressing, how unsafe they may be feeling, etc. To assess a family member’s status or change in status, the county child welfare worker should ask subjective questions and document the response. Examples include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe how you feel when this occurs. • How often does this happen or how long has this been going on? • What makes it better or worse? • What helps you to feel safe? To understand family history, these subjective inquiries are often very important. This information, along with scaling questions and “what if” questions, can help county child welfare workers develop a better understanding of family circumstances. This understanding will enable the county child welfare worker to identify jointly with family members ideas to address concerns and strengths to build upon. Subjective narrative should be completed in the same manner as objective narrative, in that the county child welfare worker must capture what information was shared, where, and how. To demonstrate emotions and/or impact of the feelings, the observed body language should also be captured in the narrative. The county child welfare worker should describe communication and observations using words such as loudly, shouting, whispering, looking at worker in the eye, eyes looking back and forth, smiling,

One of the most important aspects of the county child welfare worker’s job is to monitor family situations and assess the safety and/or risk to child(ren). Assessment should be based on professional knowledge and experience, not opinion. Referring to the case example above, the worker will assess if the child(ren) are at risk in the care of Mr. Jones who appears to be under the influence of alcohol. Case narrative will be entered into NC FAST as Case Log or Case Notes. Case Notes will only be used to capture county child welfare worker input regarding activities that did NOT involve decision-making and had no impact on safety, risk, and/or well-being. Case Notes functionality was provided to capture short (typically one-line) status updates, including but not limited to:

- “Informed supervisor that worker completed follow up with service provider as agreed to during staffing” (the narrative regarding the contact with the service provider will be entered into the Case Log).
- “Received medical report on the child” (when the report is reviewed, and the information gained from the report that impacts the case decision or recommendations will be entered in the Case Log).

information and resources to the family. Referrals to other agencies and resources are instrumental in the identification and screening of victims and in the provision of ongoing services. These referrals must be made in accordance with the needs of the child(ren).

Role of the Parent, Guardian, Custodian, or Caretaker

In cases where the perpetrator of human trafficking is not the parent, guardian, custodian, or caretaker, the county child welfare worker must assess and address the parent's ability and/or willingness to keep the child(ren) safe.

County child welfare workers should consider the unique needs for victims of human trafficking when making decisions about:

- Placement;
- Healthcare;
- Visibility in the community;
- Visitation with family members; and
- Releasing information.

Appropriate information and resources may include:

- National Human Trafficking Hotline Number (1-888-373-7888);
- Contact information for local agencies serving survivors of human trafficking; and
- Contact information for statewide agencies serving survivors of human trafficking.

See list of Service Providers and Other Referrals in Human Trafficking Cases by County.

The county child welfare worker should consider and/or ask questions about:

- The child or youth's decision to leave home, if applicable;
- Whether the parent/caretaker allowed access by the alleged perpetrator;
- If there was active or passive participation in the trafficking by the parent/caretaker;
- The ability of the parent/caretaker to care for the child(ren);
- The ability of the parent/caretaker to prevent the child(ren) or youth from running away; and

The legal connection of any individual claiming to be a parent, relative, caregiver, or legal custodian to the child(ren). In many cases traffickers will present themselves as a parent, relative, or legal custodian.

Enhanced Practice for Working with Special Populations

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
INTRODUCTION The effective child protective services social worker must approach every situation with sensitivity to those physical, emotional, cultural, or environmental factors that make children more vulnerable to abuse or less able to communicate their fears. For the purposes of this section, the term "special populations" refers to children and families who are at greater risk because of these factors. The social worker has an ethical and professional responsibility to recognize their own attitudes and prejudices regarding mental and physical disability, race, culture, sexual orientation, religious beliefs, economic status, homelessness, marital status, and other highly charged beliefs. It is impossible to grow up in a culture without such beliefs. Failure to recognize one's own perspective can lead to inaccuracy in perception and, thus, to incorrect assessments. It is not the intent of this section to provide exhaustive information about each group named, nor to suggest that the identified populations are an all-inclusive listing. This section is designed to refresh the knowledge of veteran staff, to increase the awareness of newer social workers, and to provide direction for further study. Effective interviewing strategies and techniques shall be used which are appropriate to the child's developmental level. Documentation, including observations of the child, shall explain any inability to interview the child. When a child is alleged to have a medical condition, disease, or illness relevant to the allegation, the agency shall consult the medical provider treating the condition. This consultation shall be focused on determining the family's assertions about that medical condition, or there shall be justification for why this was not done. Medical and psychological resources, such as the Child Medical Evaluation Program (CMEP) be utilized, as appropriate, in the assessment of alleged victims of neglect and/or physical, sexual, or emotional abuse. A Child Medical Evaluation (CME) or Clinical Assessment of Protective Parenting (CAPP) should be considered if the social worker has questions about any of the following issues (this list is not intended to be all inclusive). THE IMPACT OF DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITY¹ Developmental disabilities are physical or mental conditions that become apparent before the age of twenty-two, continue throughout the individual's lifetime, and cause significant impairment in daily functioning. This term includes conditions such as intellectual/developmental disability,

motor dysfunction, vision/hearing impairments, learning disabilities, communication problems, severe emotional disturbance, neurological impairments, and chronic illnesses. Accessibility and Abuse When evaluating the accessibility risk to a child with a developmental disability, the CPS social worker should not only complete the standard Structured Decision-Making tools, but also should consider the following questions: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the disability require increased physical contact, such as assistance with toileting or bathing? • Does the child have sufficient information about inappropriate or abusive touch to know to report maltreatment? • Is the child physically able to defend him/herself if necessary? • Does the child have access to friends or responsible adults to whom he/she could report maltreatment? Stress Factors in Parents/Caregivers of Developmentally Disabled Children While some disabled children may be at reduced risk for maltreatment despite the need for more nurturance, surveillance, and resources, most authors agree that the presence of a child with developmental disabilities increases the stress within the family unit. Considerations for the CPS social worker should include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What is the parent's response to the disability? Parents may react with guilt, anger, ambivalence, and/or sorrow. Have the parents received support and guidance in dealing with these feelings? Is the parental relationship suffering due to the stress of caring for a disabled child? • Are adequate resources available to the family? Does the family have sufficient time and money to access these resources? Is the family willing to use these resources? • What is the impact on the non-disabled siblings? Is there inappropriate assignment of responsibilities to or lack of nurturing for the other children?

Enhanced Practice for Working with Special Populations

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Do the parents/caregivers have realistic expectations of each child? Children with lesser degrees of impairment are thought to be at higher risk for unrealistic expectations. Mildly impaired children may not be identified as disabled and their behavior may be attributed to "willfulness." Parental Vulnerabilities Parents of developmentally disabled children are likely to be at higher risk to maltreat their children if their abilities to cope are impacted by factors such as intellectual/developmental disability, mental illness, substance abuse, poverty, unemployment, inadequate knowledge of or experience with child-rearing practices, and/or immaturity. CPS social workers should weigh these factors in the overall assessment of the child's safety and risk of harm and the need for services and resource development with the family. It is known that child abuse and neglect can cause a full range of disabilities, ranging from mild to severe. In a 1981 study, Nora Baladerian concluded that twenty-five per cent of all disabilities were caused by physical abuse or neglect. In 1991, this same researcher estimated that between 32,000 and 80,000 children become disabled each year as a result of abuse or neglect. Two limited but independent studies in 1971 indicated that eye disorders were present in forty percent of hospital samples of battered children, suggesting strongly that abuse can result in many children with visual disabilities or blindness. Whenever a disability could have been caused by maltreatment, the social worker should consider medical evaluations for the alleged victim child. Deteriorating Relationships Prolonged hospitalizations, institutionalization, frequent care giving by others, and early separations can interfere with parent-child bonding. Problems do not end after bonding. Depending on the level of I/DD, the child may have difficulty communicating about maltreatment. The social worker will need to use interviewing techniques appropriate to the mental age of the child and his/her interests. The skilled use of anatomically correct dolls, drawings, and other techniques that do not require verbal skills may be useful in the assessment process. The interviewer must exercise extreme caution not to suggest that any particular “answer” is sought in response to a question. The interviewer should be aware of assumptions he or she may make based on the physical age of the child with I/DD. A physically mature, mentally delayed child may have normal sexual responses combined with the judgment and insight of a much younger child. A caregiver/parent with I/DD cannot be assumed to be incapable of offering minimally sufficient care. The assessment of maltreatment must be based on the action or inaction of the caregiver/parent, as it is in any other situation.

INTRODUCTION / LEGAL BASIS During the 2023 legislative session, the Infant Homicide Prevention Act was amended (SB 20 [SL 2023-14]). This act decriminalizes the abandonment of an infant who is less than thirty days old under certain circumstances and modified some of the procedures when conducting CPS assessments. Safe Surrender allows a parent to surrender their newborn to a designated safe person and walk away without fear of criminal prosecution. Safe surrender is legal, provided that the infant is 30 days old or less and unharmed. Conducting the assessment of a safely surrendered child entails using the same System of Care principles that have been discussed throughout this manual. A website dedicated to information regarding Safe Surrender can be found at https://www.ncdhhs.gov/assistance/pregnancy-services/safe-surrender A. Legal Basis "§ 7B-520. Purpose; limitations. (a) Purpose. – The purpose of this Article is to protect newborn infants by providing a safe alternative for a parent who, in a crisis or in desperation, may physically abandon or harm his or her newborn and to provide information for the parent regarding the parent's rights and alternatives. (b) Limitations. – The provisions of this Article apply exclusively to safely surrendered infants as defined in G.S. 7B-101(19a). No person or agency shall act under the provisions of this Article if it is determined that any of the following are true: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> (1) A surrendered infant is reasonably believed to be more than 30 days old. (2) The infant shows signs of abuse or neglect. (3) There is reason to believe the individual surrendering the infant was not the infant's parent. (4) At the time the infant was surrendered, there was reason to believe the parent intended to return for the infant.

"§ 7B-521. Persons to whom infant may be surrendered.

The following individuals shall, without a court order, take into temporary custody an infant reasonably believed to be not more than 30 days of age that is voluntarily delivered to the individual by the infant's parent who does not express an intent to return for the infant:

- (1) A health care provider, as defined under G.S. 90-21.11, who is on duty or at a hospital or at a local or district health department or at a nonprofit community health center.
- (2) A first responder, including a law enforcement officer, a certified emergency medical services worker, or a firefighter.
- (3) A social services worker who is on duty or at a local department of social services.

If the above criteria are not met, the county shall screen the report for abandonment, and any additional maltreatment concerns if reported, with an Immediate response time.

SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS IN INTAKE / SCREENING

The report shall be documented on the CPS Structured Intake Report form DSS-1402 or CWIS regardless of the residence of the individual who received the infant.

The county that receives a report that an infant 30 days old or younger has been safely surrendered shall complete the Intake process. All requirements for the completion of the Intake process shall remain the same.

- The report shall be assigned with an IMMEDIATE RESPONSE time in accordance with N.C.G.S. §7B-302\(a\).

CPS ASSESSMENT

The CPS Assessment of a safely surrendered infant does not alter any of the requirements to complete a CPS assessment. The Impact of Cultural Diversity

Introduction and Definitions

Introduction

The field of child protective services is being challenged to respond with knowledge and sensitivity to individuals from a wide diversity of cultural backgrounds. In North Carolina, children’s services caseloads represent the diversity of the state. This population is enriched with significant representation of Native Americans and a variety of ethnic and cultural groups from Asia, the Middle East, Central and Latin America, and Europe. Each culture brings its own values, customs, beliefs and language.

North Carolina Department of Health and Human Service’s Division of Social Services (NC DHHS | DSS) remains committed to the safety, permanence and wellbeing needs of children and families, while ensuring the rights of children, biological parents, foster and adoptive parents are protected as outlined in the Multiethnic Placement Act (MEPA) and the Interethnic Provisions (IEP) of 1996 relating to the race, color, or national origin of the child and/or family involved.

The North Carolina Division of Social Services and county departments of social services are prohibited from discriminating for reasons of race, ethnicity, color, national origin, sex (including on the basis of sexual orientation and on the basis of gender identity), religion, age, disability, and/or political beliefs. This includes when working with youth, families, parents, caregivers, kinship providers, adoptive parents and licensed foster parents.

Definitions

Culture is described as “languages, customs, beliefs, rules, arts, knowledge and collective identities and memories developed by members of all social groups that make their social environments meaningful.”

Race is a social construct reflective of the physical characteristics of individuals. While ethnicity represents the shared characteristics of individuals which may include “ancestry, language or culture.” Child welfare professionals should engage children and families mindful of cultural implications which makes each individual unique. Maintaining levels of equality, (treating everyone the same) compared to equity (different levels of engagement in efforts of achieving fairness with regards to individual conditions) may be a challenge for child welfare professionals but can be mitigated by increased knowledge development which result in behavioral indicators representative of culturally competent social work practices. Discrimination, biased treatment of individuals based on race, color or national origin, is in direct violation to the Multiethnic Placement Act (MEPA) and the Interethnic Provisions (IEP) and social work practices. Cultural competence involves the ability to “understand, communicate and effectively interact with people across cultures.” Child welfare professionals in North Carolina will demonstrate culturally competent practices when engaging with children and families.

The Impact of Cultural Diversity

Personal and systemic biases may negatively impact outcomes for children and families involved with the system.

- Explicit biases refer to conscious beliefs and thoughts.
- Implicit biases reflect “subconscious feelings, attitudes and stereotypes that affect our understanding, actions and decision-making processes in an unconscious manner.”

Both explicit and implicit biases can have detrimental implications for the children and families involved with child welfare. Biases may influence initiation of legal proceedings, length of stay in foster care, consideration of kinship placements and other inequitable expectations for families. Child welfare professional should be aware and evaluate how their personal and systemic biases may negatively impact the children and families being served.

Agency Assessment: The Cultural Competence Continuum Cultural competence is a set of congruent behaviors, attitudes, and policies that come together in a system, agency, or profession and enable effective work in cross-cultural situations. Cultural competence can be viewed as a goal toward which agencies can strive. Along the continuum there are many points of development. Six of these points are identified as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Cultural destructiveness. Extreme examples would include cultural genocide; dehumanization or sub humanization of client groups; and/or bigotry, which allows the dominant group to disenfranchise, control, exploit, or systematically destroy the minority population. Cultural destructiveness can be subtle as well as overt. • Cultural incapacity. This system or agency lacks the capacity to help minority clients or communities; the system is biased, believes in the superiority of the dominant group, and is 	Cultural Competence Model North Carolina is committed to providing equitable and inclusive services to children and families interacting with the child welfare system. Characteristics of these agencies include discriminatory hiring practices, subtle messages to people of color that they are not valued or welcomed, and generally lower expectations of minority clients. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Cultural blindness. The culturally blind agency provides services with the expressed philosophy of being "unbiased." These agencies typically act as if helping approaches used by the dominant society are universally applicable. Such services tend to be useless to all but the most assimilated people of color and ignore the richness of cultural diversity. Ethnocentrism is reflected in attitude, policy, and practice despite the agency's liberal self-assessment. • Cultural pre-competence. These agencies recognize their deficiencies and make genuine efforts toward cultural competency by hiring minority staff, by recruiting minority members for boards and advisory committees; by exploring how to reach minority populations in their service area, and by initiating training for their staff in cultural sensitivity. Agencies at this point are prone to premature senses of accomplishment or failure. • Basic cultural competence. Culturally competent agencies are characterized by acceptance and respect for difference, continuing self-assessment regarding culture, careful attention to the dynamics of difference, continuous expansion of cultural knowledge and resources, and the provision of a variety of service models in order to better meet the needs of minority populations. community, and actively decides what it is and is not capable of providing to minority clients.

- Advanced cultural competence. The most positive end of the scale is represented in the agency that holds culture in high esteem, that adds to the knowledge base of culturally competent practice through research and experimentation that seeks out staff who are specialists in culturally competent practice. (The preceding discussion was included in a pilot training program for cultural competence prepared for the People of Color Leadership Institute of the Northwest Indian Child Welfare Association, Inc. in Portland, Oregon in June 1992.)

Achieving Cultural Competence

Five essential elements contribute to the process of a system, institution, or agency becoming more culturally competent. They are:

- The agency learns to value and seek out diversity;
- The agency conducts ongoing cultural self-assessments, recognizing the impact of culture on the system's philosophy and practice;
- The agency understands the dynamics of cross-cultural difference, anticipating and planning for the misinterpretation and misjudgment which occurs normally in such interchanges;
- The agency incorporates cultural knowledge into service delivery; and

The Impact of Cultural Diversity

- The agency constantly adapts to diversity, helping to create a better "fit" between the needs of the community and the services available through the agency.

Agency Assessment of and Response to Cultural Diversity

In March of 1990, the Child Welfare League of America, through its Task Force on Cultural Competence, made recommendations identifying the best methods and practices for responding to cultural diversity. These recommendations, with some of the practical implications for social workers in child protective services, are:

- Expanding the knowledge about the ethnic composition of the child welfare system.

Each county should take the initiative to determine the degree of ethnic diversity of the county population as well as the current caseload, in order to determine what cultural knowledge and practice sensitivity should be developed within the agency.

- Developing techniques for raising sensitivity to the issues of ethnicity and culture in child welfare policy and practice.

Some of the issues to be considered should include: the availability of trained interpreters for clients who are not fluent in the English language; differences in child-rearing practices which fall into the "gray area" of abuse/neglect laws; cultural practices which are not harmful to the child but which may be misinterpreted; identification of trusted leaders and culturally acceptable resources within the minority population; and the cultural acceptability of resources and assistance from the DSS. Cultural-specific knowledge should also include an understanding of community expectations of appropriate childrearing practices, the community's view of child development and children's ability to handle responsibility, and the community's views of the roles of "family."

- Designing mechanisms to encourage agency administrators and practitioners to improve their capacity to manage and serve culturally diverse clients.

Both staff and administrators need to attend workshops and training sessions designed to increase cultural competence, and to share the learning from such events with staff that are unable to participate.

- Planning strategies for increasing the participation of minorities in the decision-making process within child welfare agencies.

In addition to striving for cultural diversity in hiring practices, agencies can also encourage the involvement of individuals from significantly represented populations on community child protection teams, boards of social services, the Guardian Ad Litem program, and advisory committees. The community can serve as a resource to financially strapped agencies by providing volunteer interpreters. Such interpreters require training regarding confidentiality.

Guidelines for Social Work Practice

If a person assumes that his or her world view is the best, right, or the "only" one, s/he is ethnocentric. Ethnocentrism prevents us from understanding others, can cause us to communicate disrespect, will interfere with our ability to communicate effectively with those of differing values, and will prevent our learning from the experiences and successes of other cultures. At the other extreme, if we accept all behavior which is condoned within a culture or subculture, we may overlook maltreatment. We need to develop our abilities to assess cultural beliefs and practices based on the function of that belief or practice: cultural traits have validity if they serve a function of survival, enhance social integration and organization, and promote the individual and collective well-being of group members (CWLA, Child Protective Services: A Training Curriculum, Volume 1, p.99-109).

Abuse, neglect and dependency are still as they are legally defined but the response is one that is educational rather than accusatory. For example, though a family may feel a particular discipline is useful at home, educate the family that it is against the law and direct them to try something more appropriate. Some of the areas of social work practice which are particularly vulnerable to cultural insensitivity are:

- The Development of the Casework Relationship
 - Many minority cultural groups do not trust "white" institutions.
 - Miscommunication and misinterpretation of culturally defined behavior is likely. If the client and social worker are not fluent in the same language, trained interpreters will be needed to facilitate communication. Qualified interpreters who follow agency policy regarding confidentiality are critically important to the CPS process.
 - Unintentional disrespect may be shown by ignorance of "social rules", such as using direct eye contact or addressing the client by his or her first name.
 - Casework decisions may exclude persons in traditional positions of influence.
 - People typically do not trust someone who is different.

- The Assessment of Abuse/Neglect/Dependency

The Impact of Cultural Diversity

<ul style="list-style-type: none">• The social worker may misjudge the presence or degree of maltreatment if client behavior is viewed outside the cultural norms of the majority.• Assessment of safety and of risk of harm to the child must occur within the context of culture if it is to have meaning.• In cases of extreme poverty, some behaviors may be unfortunate but necessary to the survival of the family; e.g., the handling of significant responsibility by young children. <ul style="list-style-type: none">• The Assessment of Client Skills, Strengths, and Dysfunction Traits should be measured by their usefulness in a specific cultural context. Gay and lesbian youth often face ostracism and harassment from family, peers, and social institutions if they are open about their sexual orientation. Those who choose to deny or hide their sexual preferences may experience self-hatred. Families who learn that their children are homosexual react in numerous ways, from acceptance to abandonment or abuse. Many runaway children have left home because of their sexual orientation and have become easy targets for exploitation.

It is unlikely that social workers who investigate cases of abuse, neglect, or dependency would be initially informed that a family conflict involved a child's sexual orientation. Such disclosure will require a high degree of social worker sensitivity to the possibility of the issue.

- The Provision of Services
 - A social worker can anticipate problems when clients are provided services that are not compatible with their values or standards. Additionally, social workers may be dealing with conflicting values within the family unit.
 - Intervention plans should reflect culturally appropriate means of handling problems by linking clients with resources in the cultural community.
 - A social worker can ease the distrust of agencies by referring clients to helping persons within resource agencies, rather than to the agency itself.

Issues in Alternate Care

- Foster and adoptive care placements will be more stressful if the placement resource does not have understanding of cultural differences. Social workers must be knowledgeable about such issues in order to make the best use of resources and to prepare caregivers for expected behaviors.

- Awareness of cultural representation in the client population is critical to the recruitment of culturally diverse placement resources. States are required to recruit foster homes that reflect the characteristics of children needing placement. However, placement cannot be denied nor delayed simply on the basis of race or culture but must be based on the individual strengths and needs of the child and placement provider.²
- Cultural sensitivity in foster and adoptive families helps to break down ethnocentrism in the community.

The Impact of Homelessness

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
When a child is a member of a homeless family, the social worker is sometimes confronted with the responsibility for determining whether or not a homeless child is being abused or neglected or is dependent. In this situation, it is critical to determine whether or not a child's basic needs are being met, whether or not the parent is able to reasonably protect the child from harm, and whether or not temporary care with relatives, kin or others might help the parent to locate employment and permanent housing. Assessment of Abuse/Neglect of Homeless Families <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the child have living arrangements that are reasonably safe and sanitary, or is the environment clearly injurious due to illicit activities, physical endangerment, and/or unhealthful conditions? • Does the child have reasonable outlets for appropriate socialization with peers? • Does the child have untreated medical problems? • Is the school-aged child enrolled in school? • Does the family have access to minimal sanitary facilities, including working toilets, bathing facilities, and laundry facilities? • Is the child under age twelve supervised by a responsible adult? Responding to Reports of Methamphetamine Exposure

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
North Carolina continues to be confronted with methamphetamine (sometimes shortened as “meth”) problems that are unmatched by other illegal drugs in the past. Recognizing that there are other drugs that are produced in laboratories, due to the extreme volatility and dangers, methamphetamine production poses to North Carolina communities, this policy section focuses on methamphetamine laboratories. Methamphetamine is a synthetic narcotic that is inexpensive and easy to make with ingredients that are relatively easy to obtain (although on January 15, 2006, the North Carolina General Assembly passed one of the toughest laws in the country restricting the sales of cold medicines that contain pseudoephedrine, a primary precursor ingredient in methamphetamine production). The chemicals, production process and the waste generated by the production of methamphetamine in laboratories pose very serious dangers to public safety and to the environment. Some of these dangers include toxic poisoning, chemical and thermal burns, fires and explosions. During the production of methamphetamine (known as “cooking” or “the cook”) one pound of methamphetamine can generally yield five to seven pounds of toxic waste with this waste being introduced into the environment by burning or dumping. These laboratories continue to pose very real dangers to the communities in which they are located. The majority of methamphetamine laboratories discovered have been located in the western part of the state. However, since 2001 there has been a gradual progression in the number of discovered laboratories eastward across the state. In 1999, there were only nine confirmed methamphetamine laboratories in North Carolina. That number rose to 16 in 2000 (a 78% increase), 34 in 2001 (a 113% increase from the previous year), 98 in 2002 (a 188% increase from the previous year) and 177 in 2003. That is a 1,867% increase in the number of laboratories discovered within a four-year period and clearly underscores the increase of public awareness in the dangers of methamphetamine production in North Carolina. During the 1999–2003 timeframe, as the number of confirmed laboratories continued to grow, North Carolina also witnessed an increase in the size of the laboratories that were raided. “Super labs” are laboratories that produce ten or more pounds of methamphetamine at a time. Nationally, children have been found in approximately 25-30% percent of raided laboratories. The children who live in and around methamphetamine laboratories have a high risk of harm due to their developmental nature, the abuse and neglect that their parents/caretakers and others who frequent the home inflict on them and their inability to protect themselves. The children in these homes are also exposed to serious toxicities and dangers that could have long-term effects on their health and development. The long-term effects of child exposure to methamphetamine production continues to be an area of intense study. Representatives from several county and state agencies came together as a work group to address the issues of methamphetamine laboratories and safety for the children and the professionals that respond to these sites. The North Carolina Division of Social Services has taken the lead in writing policy and protocol with the help of this work group. Due to the safety risks to children, county child welfare agency staff responding to these situations, and the communities in which these laboratories are located, it is imperative that

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
guidelines and procedures for responding to methamphetamine laboratories are in place. It is also very important that everyone have clear role definitions in regard to responding to a methamphetamine laboratory site that involves children. The North Carolina General Assembly appropriated funding for policy development and training for county child welfare workers. Because of the seriousness of the situation, the 2003 legislative session, the General Assembly passed House Bill 1510 and House Bill 1536 that imposes stiffer penalties for possession of precursor substances and manufacturing methamphetamine in the presence of a person under the age of 18. Purpose Responding to a suspected methamphetamine laboratory where children are involved requires a coordinated approach involving a multidisciplinary team to ensure everyone’s safety. Those who make methamphetamine most often use methamphetamine, making them prone to aggression, extreme paranoia, visual and tactile hallucinations, depression, irritability, and “crashes.” These side effects make the user’s behavior unpredictable. Methamphetamine is a powerful stimulant and produces physiological changes similar to the “fight or flight response” and, thus, can trigger violent tendencies in the users. Methamphetamine users have been known to use weapons, explosives, traps and surveillance equipment to protect and keep their operations secret. The purpose of a multidisciplinary protocol is to provide local professionals with specific procedures for response to situations where there are drug-endangered children because of methamphetamine laboratories or other drug production, trafficking and abuse. The Division strongly recommends that Memoranda of Agreement or Memoranda of Understanding among these local multidisciplinary teams be developed, reviewed and updated regularly (i.e., annually) to formalize roles and relationships at the local level. Implementing a Drug Endangered Children (DEC) protocol that has been developed with local community requirements ensures that children who may be at risk for exposure to methamphetamine production and the risks inherently found in methamphetamine laboratories receive protection, advocacy and support. This protocol also ensures that law enforcement investigations provide the best opportunity for prosecution, while ensuring the safety of local professionals (social workers, first responders, etc.). This policy is designed to outline the process for county child welfare agency responses to methamphetamine laboratories when children are involved, as well as provide guidance around developing the local multidisciplinary protocol. While the dangerous nature of responding to methamphetamine laboratories requires some very different responses by county child welfare agencies (responses that may seem contrary to the usual practices in child welfare), many of the usual policies and procedures that apply across child welfare will remain the same. In the following policy, special attention will focus on the unusual requirements in responding to methamphetamine laboratories, while referring to the existing child welfare policy when appropriate.

Responding to Reports of Methamphetamine Exposure

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
Intake Report from Law Enforcement If a county child welfare agency receives a Child Protective Services (CPS) report from law enforcement of children living in or present where the methamphetamine laboratory was located or were otherwise endangered by exposure to the drug, its ingredients, its by-products or waste, the basic identifying information and household composition shall be documented. County child welfare staff shall follow instructions outlined in Intake in the NC Child Welfare manual for screening criteria when there are additional allegations. A two-level review is required for all CPS reports. If the referral comes from law enforcement, it should be considered a confirmed methamphetamine laboratory. It would be exceptionally rare that a referral with these allegations would not be accepted for CPS Assessment. A decision not to assess children exposed to a confirmed methamphetamine laboratory would require significant justification and adequate documentation of that decision. The CPS Intake worker shall also gather other specific information from law enforcement relating to methamphetamine laboratories to include, but not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What time is the raid planned? • Where are the children now? • At the time of the planned raid? • Is there a briefing meeting planned? If so, where and when? • Has the first responders’ team been contacted? • Has there been prior law enforcement involvement with this family? County child welfare agencies should be aware that their local law enforcement may be in contact with other appropriate law enforcement agencies including the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) certified officer and/or the State Bureau of Investigations (SBI). If the report only alleges exposure to a methamphetamine laboratory and there are no other allegations, the report should be screened in as Injurious Environment. All reports of children being exposed to suspected or confirmed methamphetamine laboratories will be accepted as an Investigative Assessment.

Protocol – What you must do	Guidance
Referrals alleging only parent or caretaker methamphetamine use may be accepted as a Family Assessment. Facilitating an immediate medical assessment may include gathering the children’s medical history, and transporting the children and the parent (not involved in the methamphetamine production), the Temporary Safety Provider, kinship care placement, or placement provider to the primary physician’s office, health department, or hospital, if ambulance transportation is not required. The county child welfare worker should gather health and medical information for the child beginning at the initial contact. If the child(ren) need to enter nonsecure custody this information should be used to complete the Child Health Status Component (DSS-5243). County child welfare staff should be aware that this examination may take several hours, and the children may need to be fed. Therefore, the county child welfare worker should arrive at the scene prepared with baby formula, snacks, money for food and/or vending machines, etc. based on the age of the children involved. Pampers, baby wipes, etc. may also need to be readily available for use by the county child welfare worker. The children shall be assessed by a physician for any immediate health or safety concerns. The physician shall screen the children for drug and chemical exposure to receive any necessary treatment and gather evidence. This screening may include, but is not limited to, obtaining a urine sample within 2 hours but no later than 4 hours; taking the children’s vital signs; liver and kidney functioning tests; baseline electrolytes; CBC; pediatric physical exam; etc. Any test run for forensic purposes must follow the chain of evidence procedures required by law enforcement. When requesting laboratory results regarding the levels of methamphetamine in children, the county child welfare worker should remind laboratory staff that any evidence of methamphetamine (even trace amounts) should be reported. Industrial levels should not be used in evaluating children’s exposure to methamphetamine. Please refer to the Drug Endangered Children Protocol: Initial Medical Assessment (DSS-5256) for the form to be completed by the physician during the medical assessment. Be aware that if the county child welfare agency does not hold custody, the county child welfare worker cannot give permission or sign for medical treatment for the children. If a parent/caretaker is not available to give consent for the required medical evaluation, then the parent must give the Temporary Safety Provider consent to sign for medical treatment. This consent for medical treatment and evaluation can be added to the Safety Assessment with the parents/caretakers’ signatures. NCGS § 90-21.1 gives physicians the authority to treat minors without the parent’s permission in certain situations. If the parents/caretakers refuse to give the Temporary Safety Provider consent, the county child welfare agency may file a petition to ask the court’s permission for medical treatment or file a juvenile petition requesting a nonsecure custody order for the child. If necessary, the county child welfare agency staff may assume temporary custody of the children under NCGS § 7B-500 and NCGS § 7B-501. If legal

custody is assumed, the county child welfare worker(s) shall complete all necessary legal paperwork and file the juvenile petition requesting nonsecure custody as needed (for additional information on this process, please refer to Juvenile Court). When the children are removed from the laboratory site, none of their belongings may be removed from the home and taken with them to their new setting. The only exception to this can be any necessary medication or medical equipment that can be decontaminated by wiping off with soap and hot water. The county child welfare agency may consider having items such as bottles, blankets, teddy bears, pacifiers, diapers, snacks, juices, formula, children’s books, toys, toothbrushes, hairbrushes, pajamas, and other necessary clothing in all sizes, etc. available to replace some of the children’s belongings. The county child welfare agency may also consider having shoe protectors, latex gloves, and disposable wipes available for the county child welfare workers’ safety. If media arrives at the scene, county child welfare agency staff should be mindful of the children and their exposure to the cameras and reporters. If possible, the children should be protected from media exposure. The county child welfare worker(s) shall also be responsible for initiating a CPS Assessment according to policy and locating safe housing for the children. Locating safe housing may include completing a North Carolina Safety Assessment (DSS-5231) with the parents at the scene of the laboratory or in the jail and an Kinship Care Initial Assessment (DSS-5203) on the home of a Temporary Safety Provider. The agency may also assume legal custody and place the children in a licensed placement or with a kinship care provider after the completion of an Initial Provider Assessment (DSS-5203). If children are found at a property that has been used for the production of methamphetamines, the children must not be permitted to remain at, or return to that property, prior to its decontamination. NCGS § 130A-284, effective January 1, 2005, states: “For the protection of the public health, the Commission shall adopt rules establishing decontamination standards to ensure that certain property is reasonably safe for habitation. An owner, lessee, operator or other person in control of a residence or place of business or any structure appurtenant to a residence or place of business, and who has knowledge that the property has been used for the manufacture of methamphetamine, shall comply with these rules. The contaminated property shall not be occupied prior to decontamination of the property in accordance with these rules.” County child welfare agency staff shall provide the person assuming care of the children with a description of what the child has been exposed to, any medical treatment the child has received, any follow up appointments the child has, instructions for avoiding contamination; observing the child for symptoms that require medical care, and the name and number of whom to call if the he or she

Refer to the Drug Endangered Children Protocol: Placement Guidelines (DSS-5257) for additional information and for a form that provides the placement provider with all necessary information. If there is not a confirmed laboratory on the property, the county child welfare worker(s) shall continue with the CPS Assessment based on any other allegations of abuse, neglect, and/or dependency that may have been alleged in the referral. Children NOT Found in the Presence of a Methamphetamine Laboratory at the Time of First Contact If the children are not in the home at the time of the initial contact, the county child welfare worker(s) will locate them and assess their health, safety, and well-being. The children may not need to be decontaminated if they have been out of the home for 72 hours, but they will need to be examined by their physician. If the children are at school, the risk is minimal that they may have contaminated other children or school personnel because most of the chemicals dissipate in the air once the child is out of the area where the laboratory is located Ongoing CPS Assessment The county child welfare agency shall work in close partnership with local law enforcement and the local district attorney’s office to make a decision regarding any criminal charges filed. The county child welfare agency shall assist with this process by sharing any pertinent information and testifying in court, if necessary. Within 48 hours of the children staying with a Temporary Safety Provider, a kinship care provider, or a licensed foster care provider, the county child welfare worker(s) shall make contact with the children and caregiver to determine how the children are doing, if there are any medical follow-up needs, if a referral to Children’s Developmental Services Agency (CDSA) for an early intervention evaluation, or if a referral to the Local Management Entity (LME) for a mental health assessment is needed. This timeframe is necessary because of assuring any medical needs are met and because at this time the effects of long-term exposure to methamphetamine are unknown. Any necessary evaluations shall be scheduled as quickly as possible to ascertain and obtain the appropriate services needed for the children. The county child welfare worker(s) shall coordinate a joint interview of the children with law enforcement at a child friendly site within 48 hours, if not completed at the initial contact. At the initial contact, the children’s medical evaluation and needs take priority. This timeframe is necessary to assure that the children are interviewed quickly and to gather as much information as is needed to make an informed decision regarding abuse, neglect, and/or dependency.

The county child welfare worker(s) shall ensure that any necessary follow up medical care is received and may refer the children for a Child Medical Evaluation (CME) for a more thorough forensic examination. A developmental screening shall take place at this examination. If the initial urine screen was negative for methamphetamine, the county child welfare agency may consider having a hair sample taken to determine any levels of methamphetamine the child(ren) may have. This examination shall be scheduled within 30 days of the initial evaluation, although the actual examination may take place later than 30 days. The county child welfare worker(s) shall continue with the protocol for completing a CPS Assessment. Case Decision The county child welfare worker(s) shall complete the North Carolina Structured Decision-Making Tools to assist in making the case decision and staff the case with the supervisor/team once the CPS Assessment is complete. All allegations, whether contained in the original report or uncovered during the course of the CPS Assessment, shall be documented in the case record. All information gathered during the fact-finding process shall be incorporated into one case decision and one Child Protective Services Report to Central Registry (DSS-5104) for Non-NCFAST counties. Social Worker Safety Seventy-five percent of methamphetamine laboratories that have been discovered in North Carolina have been “stumbled upon.” These laboratories are most dangerous when in operation. County child welfare staff are strongly advised, if they enter a home for any reason and discover strong indications of a methamphetamine laboratory, to leave immediately and report to his or her supervisor and local law enforcement agency. County child welfare staff should not confront the parent/caretaker about the suspicions. If a methamphetamine laboratory is discovered, the county child welfare worker will return with appropriate law enforcement officers to address the allegations of the methamphetamine laboratory with the parents/caretakers. It is also important to understand that a “cook” that is interrupted is extremely dangerous and volatile. The process needs to be completed in order to avoid an explosion or fire. The county child welfare worker should never use sense of touch or smell to try to identify chemicals or unknown substances. If after being in the home or laboratory site, the county child welfare worker begins to have headaches, burning eyes, difficulty breathing, etc. medical attention should be sought immediately. The county child welfare worker may also have been exposed to

They should place any clothes worn at the lab site into a plastic bag until they can be washed. The clothes should be washed separately on the hottest setting and rewashed a second time. The clothes should be allowed to air dry outside the home--not in the dryer. The washer should be run once empty to clean it thoroughly. Shoes should be washed with the clothes if possible or wiped clean with soap and hot water. The county child welfare worker should bathe in very warm, but not hot water and use lots of soap. They should wash completely including hair, face, between toes and other hard to reach places. The tub should be drained and the county child welfare worker should take a second bath to remove any residual chemical. The tub should be drained and cleaned thoroughly afterwards. Placement Provider Preparation and Safety It is imperative that providers are given as much information concerning the child’s exposure, any medical treatment the child(ren) has received and any follow up appointments the child(ren) will need to attend. If the child is in the legal custody of the county child welfare agency, the county child welfare worker will need to provide the kinship care placement or foster parent with the Child Health Status Component (DSS5243) at the time of placement. The provider also needs to be provided information about decontamination for reassurance regarding the risk of contamination and what symptoms to look for in the child. Some contamination may not be obvious, and some precautions may be necessary. If necessary, the providers should follow the same decontamination procedures as those listed above for county child welfare workers. The county child welfare worker and licensing worker should reassure the placement provider that the risk of exposure is minimal since the child either has been decontaminated or has been assessed to not need decontamination. Because some effects of chemical exposure can develop slowly, the provider should seek immediate medical attention if he or she notices a child who has been exposed to methamphetamine production experiencing: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Headache • Drowsiness • Unusual movements like tremors, shaking, jumpiness, agitation or seizures • Difficulty breathing, wheezing, coughing or poor color • Fever • Hallucinations or mental confusions • Any other unusual symptom that seems severe

Collaboration Collaboration is an open and shared decision-making process. Those who collaborate draw upon the strengths, abilities, and resources of each member of the group. The county child welfare agencies have legal responsibility for assessing all allegations of child maltreatment. With the numerous dangers that methamphetamine production poses to children found in laboratories and the dangers involved for the professionals responding to these sites, it is imperative that county child welfare agencies work very closely with law enforcement and other service providers to ensure the safety of the children and themselves. Protocol Review After each episode of a methamphetamine laboratory discovery, the local DEC group should meet no later than 30 days to debrief, review, learn from each event, and adjust the protocol as needed. Safe Sleep

Safe Sleep

Safe Sleep and Nighttime Parenting

The North Carolina Division of Social Services recognizes that infants require developmentally appropriate parenting to ensure they are able to grow and advance during one of the most fragile times of their lives.

The purpose of this document is to provide local county child welfare workers guidance on assessing and ensuring safe sleep practices are being followed in the home until the child reaches one year of age. The following safe infant sleep recommendations applies to infants from birth to 12 months of age. This includes preterm infants' home from the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) and infants with reflux. It also provides resources to educate parents and caretakers on how to individualize implementation of infant safe sleep practices within their homes.

Definitions - Terminology Glossary

Nighttime Parenting: The acknowledgement that caring for an infant requires the parent/caregiver to be responsive to the infant's needs at night, not just during the daytime. This is especially true for infants who wake throughout the night. This can be challenging for parents/caregivers and requires extra thought, support, and preparation to ensure the safe care of infant, including the practice of safe sleep.

Safe Sleep for Infants

Prior to the first year of life, infants need anywhere from 12 to 17 hours of sleep daily¹. Unsafe sleep practices are a leading cause of death for North Carolina infants. Many of these deaths could have been prevented. This means that determining infant safety must include ensuring the physical environment is equipped to accommodate this need. It also means that child welfare workers must assess the caretaker's capacity to provide suitable arrangements and parenting that keep infants safe particularly when sleeping. Knowledge of state and local resources available to assist infants is paramount to supporting families with practicing safe sleep.

Families often have misinformation and/or do not follow infant safe sleep practices and child welfare workers should consider engaging parents and caretakers in the discussion of infant safe sleep by:

- Ask open-ended questions to encourage honest more in-depth conversations.
- Show respect and understanding of individual family's beliefs, needs, and concerns. Allow them to share their family's perspective on safe sleep.

Safe Sleep

- Probe for questions or concerns regarding the recommendations. Engaging the family in open dialogue can allow the worker to continue to assess and work to develop an agreeable safe sleep plan for the family.
- Expect resistance or questions based on past experience, social and family influence, and cultural practices. It is helpful to remember that families may receive differing information from perceived credible sources. Workers should not engage in a conflict with the family, but work to negotiate a safe sleep plan everyone can agree on.
- Work together with the family to reduce the risk of unsafe sleep practices for each unique family/caregiver. This may require each family member/caregiver to have a separate sleep plan.

SAFE SLEEP PRACTICES

Infants and children under the age of one should always be placed to sleep on a firm and flat mattress in a safety approved crib, bassinet, or portable crib. The sleep space should only include a mattress and a fitted sheet. No other items should be in the sleep space, including blankets, pillows, toys, bumper pads, and/or sleep positioners. It is very dangerous for an infant to sleep in an inclined seat, adult bed, recliner, or sofa. The infant should not sleep on the same sleep space with another person. Infants can share a room with the caregiver but should not share a sleep space. Parents who bring their infant into the bed for feeding must remove all soft items and bedding from the area. The infant should be placed on their back in their own sleep space when finished.

The infant should be placed on their back for every nap and at night—never on their side or stomach. An infant may roll to their side or back on their own, but they should always be placed to sleep on their back. At night, the caretaker should be providing care in a space that allows them to remain awake while providing care and ensure that the infant is returned to a safe sleep space. It is recommended that infants who are still waking multiple times to feed be kept in the room close to the caretaker's bed, but on a separate sleep surface designed for infants making it easier to feed, comfort, and watch the baby at night.

It is also recommended that the caretaker set a timer to ensure that the baby is placed back in the safe sleep space in case they fall asleep. The caretaker should avoid couches and armchairs for feeding or caring for infants when there is a concern they might fall asleep. It may be helpful for a caretaker to consider feeding the child in a dining chair to assist with remaining awake. In cases where there are multiple caregivers taking turns providing care to the infant can help to ensure that the infant makes it back to a safe sleep space each time. Be sure that anyone who provides care for your infant follows safe sleep recommendations.

Any smoking or vaping use should be done outside of the home and away from the infant. Smoke exposure has been shown to increase the risk of infants dying of sleep-related causes, including SIDS. The caretaker should change clothes and wash hands prior to touching the infant again. The care of an infant should only be provided by a sober parent/caregiver. Substances include alcohol, marijuana, legal and illegal drugs and medications. This can also include over the counter cold and sleep aid medications that can impair a parents' capacity to provide care for the infant.

Substance use can make parents/caretakers sleepy and less aware creating difficulties in their ability to care for an infant. This makes it harder to engage in safe sleep practices and sleeping with an infant very dangerous.

Safe Sleep

Important Points to Consider:
Social Workers should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Address infant safe sleep practices in the Safety Plans and the Plan of Safe Care • Inquire and assess infant safe sleep in all phases of Child Welfare, starting with CPS Intake • The infant’s sleep space must be seen at all home visits. If the sleep space is not safe, the SW must make a plan to ensure the space is safe prior to leaving the home. • All adults who provide care of the child must be included in safety planning to address safe sleep. • All planning regarding infant safe sleep must be open, detailed conversations and more than just providing a handout out or instruction.
Working with Families on Safe Sleep for Infants
Protocol-What You Must Do	Guidance-What You Should Do
CPS INTAKE When a report includes an infant and the reporter is aware of the infant’s sleep space, the intake worker must document the infant’s sleep space, how they are placed to sleep, and if the infant sleeps alone (not sharing the same sleep surface with anyone). If the reporter has the answer to these questions, it will allow the assessment worker to better prepare for the initial meeting with the family. It is required to document any concerns regarding substance use by caretakers. Additionally, inquiring about how substance use (legal or illegal, treatment or recreational) affects the caretaker’s ability to ensure the infants’ safety must also be thoroughly screened and documented. The intake worker must request information including which substance(s) is being used, the level of use, and whether their ability to provide care for the infant has been impacted. CPS FAMILY AND INVESTIGATIVE ASSESSMENTS When an accepted assessment includes an infant, safe sleep practices must be addressed with the caretakers. When information included in the report alleges unsafe sleep practices the assessment worker should bring resources and be prepared to provide educational information, such as the practice guide to the family and assist them in developing a safe sleep plan. The practice guide included in the Child Welfare Manual can be used to help workers prepare for and provide education to families. The worker should use this time to identify and build the Safety Network which can be a useful tool in helping the family enlarge the number of supports they have in providing care for an infant. While engaging the Safety Network the worker should ensure that each member of the network understands the importance of maintaining the safe sleep plan that has been developed. When completing a thorough CPS Assessment that addresses safe sleep it must include:

Safe Sleep

- Observation of where the infant sleeps. This should include all spaces that the caretaker places the infant to sleep.
- Demonstration by the caretaker of how to position the infant for sleep. The infant should be placed on a firm, flat surface and on their backs to sleep each time. Child welfare workers should assist caretakers displaying difficulty with positioning with education and demonstration as necessary. Please refer to the practice guide for additional resources.
- Identification of all substance use activity, including tobacco. Substance use that can impair the caretaker's ability to provide care for the infant, must be discussed and thoroughly documented. Additionally, a plan must be made to ensure the safety of the infant while the parent or caretaker's ability to parent is impaired. If there are allegations an infant has been affected by substance use, a Plan of Safe Care (POSC) must be developed which would include a plan to keep the infant safe when a parent's ability is impaired by using substances. In cases where parents are using over the counter medications such as cold medicines or sleep aids as prescribed when it impairs their capacity to provide care, a POSC should not be developed. However, the worker should work with the family to ensure there is a plan for the infant's care while under the influence of the medications and it should be documented as a part of the safe sleep plan on the Safety Assessment.
- A plan that ensures that the infant will be placed in a safe sleep environment every time they sleep, to include naps and at night. In cases where the family does not have a designated safe sleep space and the county or a community agency provides Pack N Plays, they should be provided to the family. The family can also be asked to empty out a dresser drawer or laundry basket and put it on the floor without heavy items in it and place the child there.
- A strategy that addresses housing inconsistencies when a parent or caretaker is homeless or transient. In situations where a family does not have stable housing it is of the utmost importance that each visit includes a thorough assessment of where the infant is sleeping. It may require additional planning with the family at each transition to ensure that infant safe sleep is being practiced.

There must be documentation that includes all the elements listed above. The NC Safety Assessment (DSS-5231) must include the actions to address any concerns identified regarding safe sleep on page seven in the Temporary Parental Safety Agreement. The use of safe sleep practices and the plan to address safe sleep must be assessed at each follow up visit to the home. The DSS-5231 must be updated to include any plans to address any newly identified safe sleep concerns as they arise during the assessment. This must include any new safety concerns as well as ongoing concerns regarding a family's use of safe sleep. In cases where a Temporary Safety Provider is identified they must provide a physical environment in compliance with and agree to parent consistent with infant safe sleep. This must also be thoroughly documented.

Safe Sleep

IN-HOME SERVICES

When a case has been found Services Needed and there are infants within the family, a safe sleep plan must be included as part of the In-Home Family Services Agreement (DSS-5239). There must be a continued assessment of infant safe sleep practices throughout the life of the In-Home case and at every visit until the child reaches the age of one. This must be documented monthly on the North Carolina Monthly In-Home Contact Record (DSS-5236). All caretakers providing care of the infant should be provided with education as needed and as new questions arise.

PERMANENCY PLANNING

Birth parents, kinship caretakers, and foster and adoptive parents must be educated on infant safe sleep practices to ensure that they are equipped with the most current information. It is critical that child welfare workers providing foster care through adoption services confirm that homes where infants are placed are in adherence with safe sleep practices. Foster Care and Adoption workers must document the infant safe sleep space and practices until the infant is one year of age. All safe sleep discussions and any practice concerns should be documented on the North Carolina Monthly Permanency Planning Contact Record (DSS-5295) at least monthly. Foster Home Licensing Workers are required to do quarterly visits to ensure a safe environment and that licensing standards are met which includes a safe sleep space and practice. It is also vitally important that infants have a safety approved sleep space (crib, bassinet, or portable crib) that meets current standards and requirements prior to the infant being placed in the home.
